Republicans to hold postcard presidential primaries subcommittee to arrange details. County convention at court house March 25 at 10 a. m.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—At the conclusion of the day of an unusual hearing before the house committee on rules on bills proposing an investigation of conditions relating to the strike of textile workers at Lawrence, Mass. Representative Victor Berger of Wisconsin and Robert McCortney of Illinois almost came to blows and were separated by Representative Wilson of Illinois.

The Republican voters in El Paso county will be allowed to express their preference for a primary for the presidential nomination as a result of the unanimous action of the Republican county central committee at a meeting in the court house yesterday afternoon commencing at 4:30 o'clock.

The rules committee had adjourned the hearing to Monday necessitating the stay in Washington of women and children from the Lawrence woolen mills who had come to testify concerning strike conditions.

Primaries to be held March 25—each precinct entitled to one delegate at large and one for every 100 voters cast for Stephen D. Young.

Who is going to pay the expenses of these people? asked Representative Berger, the Socialist member of the house, as the committee was about to adjourn.

Convention March 23. The central committee set March 23 as the date for the primaries to elect delegates to the county convention, the polls to be open between 4 and 7 p. m. in Colorado Springs, Colorado City, Manitou, Ironton, Roswell, Broadmoor, Pike View and Curtis, and between 10 a. m. and 12 o'clock noon in all other precincts. The county convention will be held at the court house at 10 o'clock on the morning of March 25.

Representative Henry chairman of the committee declared nothing could be done by the committee, whereupon Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania suggested that a collection be taken to defray the expenses.

Although the committee members were unanimously in favor of primaries there was no little discussion as to the kind of primary that should be adopted, because of the favor of the postal card system, others wanting the open primary.

Representative Berger, who was standing near by, protested against Berger's insinuations.

John R. Etchison, who is known to a number of Colorado Springs residents because of his frequent visits to the city, was taken to the police station by a patrolman yesterday afternoon after he had been arrested for disturbing the peace.

Who are you? demanded McCortney of Berger.

J. R. Etchison, Well Known Here, Nabbed of $104,000 in K. C.

I represent the people of Wisconsin, Berger hotly replied, and I don't propose to have these people receive any blood money.

Representative Wilson of Illinois a member of the rules committee, intervened between Berger and McCortney. His interference in the squabble ended the controversy, and McCortney and Cox left.

This was the climax to an exciting session of the committee in which Lawrence strike conditions were revealed from several rival sources.

In a room crowded with spectators, Samuel Lipson, a member of the Lawrence strike committee, was the witness stand, and Representative Fox of North Carolina asked him to describe the scene at the station when the police and the militia prevented children from being sent away from the strike city.

Charges Police Starred Trouble. "Did you really see the mothers clubbed?" Fox asked.

"No," the witness replied, "but I saw them shoved around."

Lipson referred to the killing of John Ramey, who was bayoneted by the militia as he stood, inoffensively, the witness said, in front of his own home.

He said Ramey was not a scoundrel and that he was not a sympathizer. Lipson added that the strike was started seven weeks ago, and the militia called in immediately after mill workers had a little trouble with the police.

"And the police started this trouble," he said. "We were not striking against the police or the militia. They started to make us move faster when we gathered in groups on the streets and they enforced their arguments with the bayonet."

Referring to the killing of a woman he said: "We were not striking against the police or the militia. They started to make us move faster when we gathered in groups on the streets and they enforced their arguments with the bayonet."

Judge Throws Four of Five Counts in Indictments Against Alleged Shoe Trust, Out of Court

FOUR of five counts in the indictment against the alleged shoe trust, which was returned by the grand jury at the federal court yesterday, were thrown out of court by Judge Putnam.

Judge Putnam held that the criminal omission of the shoe companies was valid and purely a business arrangement and that the companies' depurment to charges of conspiracy to monopolize and restrain trade.

Fairfax Silver

A beautiful Colonial design combining both beauty and substantiality is named for the Fairfax family of Virginia. It is the foremost design of one of America's great silver manufacturers and we have it in stock and ready to ship. Because of its design, it cannot be so harmonious with silver as the other designs. For wedding gifts, for home decoration, for just now we are showing this silver group West Window.

Biggest Gun in World

The biggest gun in the world is a 16-inch breechloading rifle designed for the defense of the United States and its insular possessions, the first one completed since intended for the Panama canal. The total length of the gun is 43 feet 2 1/2 inches. It has a diameter of 16 inches at the breech, tapering to 20 inches at the muzzle. If smokeless powder is used it is estimated that a full charge of 375 pounds will throw a projectile weighing 2,400 pounds a distance of 22 miles. The projectile is prepared for the monster in 6 feet 4 inches long, and it has been calculated that it will go through a steel plate 43 1/2 inches thick. If the plate was placed at the muzzle. The total weight of this monster is 130 tons. What would happen to a vessel when hit by one of its projectiles can only be surmised. The French battleship Liberté, which blew up recently, would probably look like a slightly damaged ship, beside it. The largest rifled gun of large caliber heretofore constructed was the Italian gun caliber 17.7 inches, the French gun, of 14 1/2 inches caliber and the Armstrong gun of 16.25 inches caliber. The greatest guns ever built by the Krupp had a range of 12 1/2 miles. None of these compares in point of energy and range with the newest American product.

Personal Mention

Mr. and Mrs. John Evans, of this city, are visiting in the Adair Hotel.

M. J. Davis, a prominent banker of Castle Rock, is spending the week-end in the Adair.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hubert and daughter, Louise, of Manitou, have returned from a visit of three and a half months in Oklahoma and Texas.

A visitor was to call, but missed the M. & L. cafe, has taken an apartment at the Adair Hotel for the remainder of the winter.

Dr. H. A. Puckett, of Burlington, Ill., arrived in this city yesterday to spend several weeks, visiting his daughter, Miss Pinkham, at the Adair Hotel.

The condition of Col. T. L. Waggoner, who has been ill for several weeks and has been assigned his position as city engineer, was reported last night as unchanged.

Miss Ruth Law and Miss Eleanor Jones will leave today for California. Miss Law will visit her sister, Miss Nell Law, at Long Beach, and Miss Jones will visit friends in Los Angeles. They will be away for some time.

A. J. Braden and family have just returned from Kansas City and will make their permanent residence here. Mr. Braden is well known among the prominent business people here, having founded the Fairland moving picture house a number of years ago. Since leaving the city, Mr. Braden has been running picture shows at Loveland and Boulder, Colo., and Kansas City, Mo.

Dr. George Rea, aged 30, and for three years resident physician at the Nordrach ranch sanatorium, died suddenly in Dragon, Utah, according to word received here yesterday. The body was taken to his former home in Hazelhurst, Miss., for burial.

Dr. Rea was a graduate of the Memphis Medical college in 1904 and a short time later came west for his health. He was prominent in his profession and secured a position at the Nordrach ranch. Last September he was appointed surgeon for the Utah Railroad company, with headquarters at Dragon. He was unmarried and leaves no immediate relatives.

The funeral of Mrs. Blanche Hamus was held yesterday morning from the residence, 807 North Weber street. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Rachel Carter, colored, will be held from the A. M. E. church this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in Evergreen cemetery. Mrs. Carter died in Leadville several days ago.

ANOTHER DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB A CANADIAN BANK. ONE OF BANDITS KILLED

Calgary, March 2.—(U.P.)—A daring attempt to rob the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Calgary, Alberta, was made last night. One of the bandits was killed and the others escaped with a large sum of money.

The bank was closed at midnight and the bandits entered the building through the back door. They were met by the night watchman, who was killed. The bandits then proceeded to the vault and made off with $100,000.

The police are now searching for the bandits and have received information that they are in the United States.

SUFFRAGETTES IN LONDON TO PRISON

LONDON, March 2.—(U.P.)—Three suffragettes were sentenced to prison for their part in the protest against the government's attempt to pass a bill to restrict the franchise.

The women were charged with obstructing the traffic and with using violence against the police. They were sentenced to terms of three months.

The protest was part of a larger campaign to demand equal rights for women in the franchise.

CAMPAIGN FOR ROOSEVELT OPENED IN NEW ENGLAND. SEN. BEVERIDGE JOINS

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., March 2.—The political situation in Indiana was reported to Colonel Roosevelt tonight by ex-Congressman Landis of that state, who came to Oyster Bay to spend the night at Sagamore hill. Mr. Landis was Colonel Roosevelt's only visitor today. The colonel gave little time to politics, but devoted himself to outdoor exercise.

Colonel Roosevelt laughingly denied several published statements attacking him, including one that he had given his word to Secretary Stimson and Secretary Meyer, several weeks ago that he would not accept the presidential nomination.

Stories like those, he said, probably would come up at the rate of one or more a day.

"Scotty" Thompson, the village constable, visited Sagamore hill today, to serve a summons for Colonel Roosevelt to appear for jury duty, Monday, at Mineola, county seat.

Open Campaign in New England.
BOSTON, March 2.—A letter from Theodore Roosevelt and speeches by ex-Governor Fort of New Jersey, Governor Stubbs of Kansas and Senator Clapp of Minnesota, signalized the opening of the Roosevelt Progressive New England campaign, in Tremont temple, tonight.

The chairman also read a telegram of congratulations from the headquarters of the National Roosevelt committee in Chicago, declaring the nation appears to be five to one for Roosevelt, and predicting that Illinois will give Roosevelt 50 of its 58 delegates. Colonel Roosevelt's letter said:

"This is more than a mere party contest; this is a contest to establish the right of the people to rule themselves, and through their own efforts, to work for the cause of social and industrial justice, and of good will among men.

Are True Conservatives.
"We are the true conservatives, for in the long run it will be found that the only true conservative is the man who resolves to set his face toward the future and strives to give wise guidance to those who are struggling toward the ideal of fair dealing between man and man. We believe only through the triumph of the principles for which we stand can business prosperity be assured to this country on a permanent basis, and we are certain that if these principles are embodied in action, such prosperity will come.

But prosperity must stand on a foundation of justice, justice to wage workers, to capitalists, to the general public. All we ask is such justice and we are anxious that it should be scrupulously given, that it should be scrupulously exacted. We have announced our faith in our adherence to a better ideal for sure there can be no better ideal than that of the achievement of justice through the rule of the people, and we hold also that because of the very fact that we idealists, we are in the truest sense, the word practical men, for we intend in good faith to try to realize our ideals, and this realization will make not only for the moral, but for the material well being of all our people.

Ex-Governor Fort, attacked the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as not being a revision downward of duties and said of President Taft had vetoed it as a violation of the platform on which he was elected, he would have stamped his independence and practicalness in the hearts of the people at the very outset of his administration."

Speakers for Ohio.
COLUMBUS, O., March 2.—Governor or Stubbs of Kansas, Governor Johnson of California and perhaps Theodore Roosevelt will take part in a speech-making campaign in Ohio, preliminary to the primaries in May at which district delegates to the national Republican convention will be chosen, according to an announcement made at the Roosevelt headquarters here this evening. Governor Stubbs will speak the first week in April.

Senator Beveridge Joins Forces.
WASHINGTON, March 2.—The acquisition of former Senator Beveridge of Indiana to the Roosevelt forces was announced here today. The colonel's headquarters were moved into a large suite of offices occupying the entire front of a downtown office building. Senator Dickson announced his advent as manager by securing enough space for the full expansion of the campaign force. Senator Dickson announced he would take charge of the campaign Monday.

"There is no question in any man's mind," he said today, "that an overwhelming preponderance of the Re-

WOMEN HYSTERICAL AT CHICAGO MURDER TRIAL

CHICAGO, March 2.—The closing minutes of the argument of counsel for the men charged with the murder of Mrs. Edna Mahan, were punctuated by excited screams from the ranks of women of the defendants who crowded into the courtroom.

The court room in which a stirring appeal for mercy had just been made was throbbing with an uproar. Women cried in sympathy with the overwrought men who voiced their agony of apprehension. Weeping and still hysterical, Mrs. George Mahan and Mrs. John Mahan were led from the room.

The words of the attorney drew tears from many other eyes and the mother of Mahan staggered to her feet and wailed, "Oh save my boy, save my boy, when the younger women screamed.

When quiet was restored the assistant prosecutor, in a cold, calm voice, began the final argument for the state. His argument is to be concluded Monday and the case will then go to the jury.

DELAY IN PACKERS TRIAL

CHICAGO, March 2.—A dispute between counsel over the introduction of documentary evidence halted the packers trial today, and caused an adjournment until Monday. The government attempted to introduce the weekly total shipments of dressed beef made by Swift & Co. and Morris & Co. in 1905, 1906 and 1907. The defense objected and insisted that the state must

NEW USE FOR ELECTRICITY
Current in Soil Increased Yield of Grain and Vegetables
From the New York Herald.
In 1902, Frankenstein, a German scientist, showed in Kraschenwitz, near Breslau, that by the application of electric currents to the soil the yield of grain and stalks increased with barley, sugar beets and clover 70 per cent with 12 per cent and with oats 47 per cent. The improved grain was a new one, while potatoes increased 24 per cent. Strawberries, 50 per cent. In Newcastle, some classes of wheat, 22 to 24 per cent more, sugar beets, 37 per cent more than in 1902. "Our Personal Guarantee to all Skin Sufferers"

The Robinson Drug Co.

We have been in business in this town for some time, and we are looking to build up trade by always advising our patrons right.

So when we tell you that we have found the eczema remedy and that we stand back of it with the manufacturer's ironclad guarantee, backed by ourselves, you can depend upon it that we give our advice not in order to sell a few bottles of medicine to skin sufferers, but because we know how it will help our business if we help our patrons.

We keep in stock and sell all the well-known skin remedies. But we will say this: If you are suffering from any kind of skin trouble, eczema, psoriasis, rash or tetter, we want you to try a full size bottle of D. D. D. Prescription. And, if it does not do the work, this bottle will cost you nothing. You alone to judge.

Again and again we have seen how a few drops of this simple wash applied to the skin takes away the itch, instantly. And the cures all seem to be permanent.

D. D. D. Prescription made by the D. D. Laboratories of Chicago, is composed of thymol, glycerine, oil of wintergreen and other healing, soothing, cooling ingredients. And if you are just crazy with itch, you will feel soothed and cooled, the itch absolutely washed away the moment you applied this D. D. D.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this remedy to a skin sufferer here and there and we want you to try it now on our positive no-pay guarantee.

WIRELESS WITH AN AIM

Marconi Was Invented a "Searchlight" That is Valuable
Henry Smith Williams in the West Today Magazine
Commander Marconi recently sent a wireless message from a point in Italy to Newfoundland, a distance of four thousand miles. The feat has great significance, not merely because of the distance covered (in that regard it has been surpassed in a few instances) but because the ether waves that conveyed the message were sent in a desired direction, instead of radiating into space in every direction as is usually the case with wireless signals. A newly invented device now enables Marconi, so it is claimed, to concentrate the ether waves and direct them somewhat as a light beam, in a direct order which we interpret as light.
The importance of this new development will be shown if we reflect a moment on the conditions to be met by a wireless message, whether of any kind, whether of the character that produce light or radiant heat or the electro-magnetic pulsations used in wireless telegraphy, are ordinarily sent out in every direction from their point of origin. It requires only a casual observation of the vibrations must decrease inversely as the square of the distance. Hitherto, it has been found exceedingly difficult to concentrate the vibrations, as in wireless telegraphy. If Marconi has really solved this problem, we are a long step nearer the time when wireless telegraphy may altogether take the place of the old system.

The largest gold dredger in the world, which has been recently put into operation on the Pacific coast, is electrically operated. It was built for the Yuba Consolidated Gold Field Mining company, and is at work at Hammon, Cal. The dredger is 125 feet long and requires a motive power of 120-horse-power, which 300 h.p. is necessary to handle the buckets. The current is transmitted from the shore being carried by means of insulated cables supported above the water.

CLASSIFIER OF PUBLIC LANDS

U. S. Geological Survey Makes Scientific Determination of Mineral, Nonmineral, or Irrigable Character of People's Land
The United States Geological Survey has now become in fact as well as in name the agency for the classification of the public domain. During the last five years about 285,343,889 acres has been classified by the survey, and 75,239,198 acres additional has been withdrawn from public entry.
Of these areas, coal classifications covered 15,421,429 acres; classification of metalliferous land 28,465 acres; and designation of lands enterable under the 320-acre and Enlarged Homestead Act, 190,439,916 acres.
There have been withdrawals during this period 67,734,918 acres of oil-bearing land, 3,294,914 acres of oil land, 2,398,291 acres of phosphate land, and 1,722,878 acres of land being in the valuable for the development of water power.
So far as the coal lands are concerned the survey policy is to classify and value the lands withdrawn as rapidly as possible, so as to enable their restoration to entry and sale under the law, and although the oil and phosphate lands and water-power sites are held withdrawn awaiting congressional legislation, the policy is to cut down the withdrawals to the exact acreage of land found to be underlain by oil, natural gas, or phosphate and for the water-power withdrawals to the smallest acreage which will protect the public interests.

The Enlarged Homestead designation is made on the basis of data in hand or on field examinations by the survey showing that the lands are not suitable for irrigation or may be suitable for "dry farming" as contemplated in the Enlarged Homestead law.
Engineers have figured that one waterfall in Iceland can be made to yield 50,000 horsepower and another 50,000.
Northern European forests consist almost entirely of white and pitch pine, of which nearly 70 per cent is white.

TELEPHONES OVER OCEAN

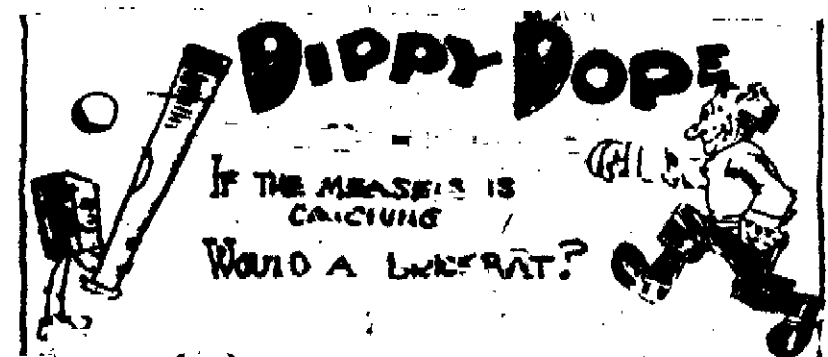

German Claims to Have Established Communication With Canada
Foreign Correspondence of the Washington Evening Star.
Telephonic communication between Germany and Canada by means of a new system of wireless telephony is claimed to have been established by a German radiooffice engineer, F. Kiebitz, who has been successfully working out by Professor Hender. Kiebitz described his experiments at the Deutsche Physikallische Gesellschaft, and his process appears to be likely to prove of considerable success.
The distinctive feature of the system is that the electric impulses are transmitted through the earth, so that no aerial wire or antenna is employed. A special type of generator is used, which gives alternating current of a frequency of about 100,000 cycles per second. The transmitting instrument is connected by two wires of a certain fixed length to two plates placed in the earth, the distance separating these plates depending on the apparatus and being equal in length to half that of the waves transmitted. A similar arrangement is used to pick up the waves and either telegraphy or telephony can be carried on.

This system is similar in its main principles to the earth-wave system of Preece, which has been somewhat improved recently.

WIRELESS WITH AN AIM

Marconi Has Invented a "Search Light" Process That is Valuable Henry Smith Williams in the World Today Magazine
Commendatore Marconi recently sent a wireless message from Goltano in Italy to Newfoundland, a distance of four thousand miles. The feat has peculiar significance, not merely because of the distance covered (in that regard it has been surpassed in a few instances) but because the ether vibrations that conveyed the message were sent in a desired direction, instead of radiating into space in every direction as is usually the case with wireless messages. A newly invented device now enables Marconi, so it is asserted, to concentrate the ether waves and direct them somewhat as a search light concentrates and directs its rays in a different order which we intend to explain.

the character that produce light or radiant heat on the electro-magnetic vibrations used in wireless telegraphy, are ordinarily sent out in every direction from their point of origin. It requires only a casual observation of the conditions to see that the intensity of the vibrations must decrease inversely as the square of the distance. Hitherto, it has been found exceedingly difficult to concentrate the ether vibrations in any one direction in wireless telegraphy. If Marconi has really solved this problem, we are a long step nearer the time when wireless telegraphy may altogether take the place of the old system.

CLASSIFIER OF PUBLIC LANDS

U. S. Geological Survey Makes Scientific Determination of Mineral, Nonmineral, or Irrigable Character of People's Lands
The United States Geological Survey has now become in fact as well as in name the agency for the classification of the public domain. During the last five years about 265,000,000 acres has been classified by the survey, and 15,339,198 acres additional has been withdrawn from public use. Of these areas, coal classifications covered 15,421,429 acres; classification of metalliferous land 283,465 acres; and designation of lands enterable under the 320-acre and Enlarged Homestead Act, 190,429,915 acres. There have been 3,960,000 acres during this period 47,734,918 acres of coal-bearing land, 3,394,316 acres of oil land, 3,394,316 acres of phosphate land, and 1,722,375 acres of land believed to be valuable for the development of water power. So far as the coal lands are concerned the survey policy is to classify and value the lands withdrawn as rapidly as possible, so as to enable their restoration to entry and sale under the law, and although the oil and phosphate lands and water-power sites are held withdrawn awaiting congressional legislation, the policy is to cut down the withdrawals to the exact acreage of land found to be underlain by oil, natural gas, or phosphate and for the water-power withdrawals to the smallest acreage which will protect the public interests. The Enlarged Homestead classifications are made on the basis of data in hand or on field examinations by the survey showing that the lands are not suitable for irrigation or may be suitable for "dry farming" as contemplated in the Enlarged Homestead law. Engineers have figured that one waterfall in Iceland can be made to yield 50,000 horsepower and another 50,000. Northern European forests consist almost entirely of white and pitch pine, of which nearly 70 per cent is white.

TELEPHONES OVER OCEAN

German Claims to Have Established Communication With Canada
Foreign Correspondence of the Washington Evening Star.
Telephonic communication between Germany and Canada by means of a new system of wireless telephony is claimed to have been established by a German postoffice engineer, F. Kiebitz, who has been experimenting with a directive system originally worked out by Prof. Dr. Vonder Herr Kiebitz described his experiments at the Deutsche Physikalische Gesellschaft, and his process appears to be likely to prove of considerable success. The distinctive feature of the system is that the electric impulses are transmitted through the earth, so that no aerial wire or antenna is employed. A special type of generator is used, which gives alternating current of a frequency of about 100,000 cycles per second. The transmitting instrument is connected by two wires of a certain fixed length to two plates placed in the earth, the distance separating these plates depending on the apparatus and being equal in length to half that of the waves transmitted. A similar arrangement is used to pick up the waves, and either telegraphy or telephony can be carried on. This system is similar in its main principles to the earth-wave system of Hertz, which has been somewhat improved recently. Four p. m. is the rainiest hour of the whole 24.

The Prosecutor Suggested a Dungeon With Bread and Water.

The New Fable of the Old-Fashioned Prosecutor and the Popular Idols.

Pictures By Albert Levering

By George Ade

She Was a Tall Gal and Very Pale, With Belladonna Optics.

ONE morning a great Judge, who had been promoted to the Bench because he could not connect as a Lawyer, climbed up on his Bench and directed the Lord High Sheriff to feed him a few Defendants.

"We have rounded up a tough bunch of Ginks," said the Attorney for the Commonwealth. "I shall ask your Honor to soak them good and proper."

The first to be led in was a grinning lout with a wide mouth, large freckles and flapping ears. It was proven that he stuck pins into his grand mother and blow up elderly gentlemen with cannon crackers and set fire to houses and was a hard nut in general. The Prosecutor suggested a Dungeon with Bread and Water.

Up spoke the Prisoner as follows: "I defy you to lay a hand on me. I am the Stand-By of the Comic Artist and the Star Attraction of the Colored Supplement. When I pull the Step-Ladder from under some Honest Workman, causing him to break his leg, or hit a Stout Lady in the Eye with a Brick, please remember that I am bringing Sunshine into thousands of Homes. As I go on my way, committing Arson, Mayhem and Assault with Intent to Kill, I am greeted by Peals of Childish Laughter. When you put me out of Business, you will be handing the Circulation an awful Wallop. I am not a Criminal; I am an Institution."

"I remember you very well," said the Judge.

"You are my Excuse for buying the Paper. While the Kids are busy with you I look up Packey McFarland and One-Round Hogan."

Just as the Celebrated Juvenile hit the Fresh Air the second Defendant came into the Dock, taking long, sneaky Strides and undulating like a Roller Coaster. She was a tall Gal and very Pale, with Belladonna Optics and her Hair shook out and a fine rhythmic Bellows Movement above the Belt Line.

"She is a raving Beetle," explained the Prosecutor. "She wants to go out doors every Night and count the Moon and pull some of that Shine Magazine Poetry. Every time she sees anybody named Eric or Geoffrey she does a Swoon, accompanied by the customary Low Cry, and later on, in her own Boudoir, which is Richly Furnished, she bursts into a Torrent of Weeping. If you start her on a Conversation about Griddle Cakes she will wind up by giving a Diagnosis of Soul-Hunger. She is a Candidate for Padded Cell No. 1 in the big Foolish House. If she continues at Large she may accidentally marry some poor misguided Clarence and then, if there are any Children, the Neighbors will have to take care of them."

"Do you not recognize me?" asked the Prisoner in low musical Tones, fixing a passionate Gaze on the Court. "I am the Heroine of a Best Seller. If I did not have these large Porcelain Orbs and the Bosom heaving in Rag Time and the Hair swirling in Glorious Profusion, do you suppose that a Member of the Upsilon Pajama Sorority would sit up until 1 A. M. with Me and a Bottle of Queen Olives and a Box of Chocs? If I made up like an ordinary Sadie and talked Straight Stuff, do you think I could last through Ten Editions? I may not be Human, but I can raise the Temperature of every Lighthouse from Bangor to San Antonio."

"You are dead right," said the Court. "We couldn't keep house without you."

So she proceeded to Exit, sneeringly, her Garments rustling and a faint Aroma of Violets lingering in her Wake, just as it does in the Red Book that sells for $1.50.

The next Prisoner was a big handsome Buck with his Clothes recently pressed and many Gloves.

"I want a Life Sentence for this Guy," said the learned Prosecutor. "He is so crooked that a Straight Edge would cut him in a thousand places. He would bite an Ear-Ring off a Debutante or blow open a Family Vault to unscrew the Handles from the Casket containing Father. He promotes phoney Corporations and sells Florida Orange Groves that have Crocodiles swimming around on top of them. He is a prize Bunk, a two-handed Gaffer, a Short Change Artist and a Broadway Wolf. Slip him the Limit."

"You've got me wrong, Steve," said the Prisoner, softly. "I used to be a Depraved Character, but now I am the Big Hero. Under the revised Code of Morals a Handy Boy who goes out and trims a Bush for everything in his Kick becomes recognized as a Comedy Hit and every Seat on the Lower Floor goes for two Bones. Instead of doing a Lock-Step to and from the Broom Factory I work up to a Dress Suit Finish and marry the Swell Dame. And the Mob is with me. If it came to a Straw Vote between me and Lyman Abbott I would win by a City Block."

"The Gentleman speaks the Truth," said the Court. "In this Fair Land we forgive a Man anything if his Work is Classy. Instead of committing you to the Pen I shall arrange to spend the Evening with you."

The next was a tall snaky Female with black Beads all over her Person and she was smoking a Cigarette, half closing her Eyes as she blew Rings toward the Ceiling.

"Judge, she is some Brazen Hussy, believe me," said the Prosecutor. "After turning Flip-Flops around the Ten Commandments for fifteen years she married a Good Man and put him on the Fritz. Her regular Job is to doll on a Divan and turn the Coaxing Eye on some poor Geezer who is wandering from Drawing Room to Drawing Room, trying to have his Life wrecked. Please send her up. She is a Mar- nace to Respectable Society."

The Prisoner looked at him in haughty Disdain.

"I am not a Low Woman," she said, proudly. "I am a Matinee Favorite. The Best People in our City hang their Chins over the Seats in front and cry softly whenever I get into Trouble. Don't look me up or they will be lonesome."

"Go, woman, and keep on Sinning," said the Court, in a kind Voice.

Then, turning to the Defender of the General Good, he said: "You are two years behind the Prosecution. Hereafter arrest only Business Men who have been Successful."

Deep Gloom When Bretons Wed

Brides All Set the Same Day, Somber in Tone, Resplendent in Raiment—Obdurate Fathers Decline to Add a Goose or Bushel of Strawberries to Dowry. Work for the Bazilian

From the New York Evening Post.

A sensation such as it has never before had in all its history, has this winter swept Plougastel. The day fixed on which all the village sweethearts have from time immemorial come before the maire to be married, has this year been changed from the time-honored second Tuesday in January to the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday. The reason for the change appears to be that the cross of last season were so poor, and the fishing season so bad as to make the business of mirth-making very discouraging. Also the bazilian or professional matchmaker of the village was very ill in the fall and unable to attend properly to his important and delicate duties. All these facts combined to cause the change in date, a circumstance so unheard of before in the village as to furnish food for gossip and for dire prophecy for a long time to come. The fact that the number of happy couples to be joined has fallen off from 42 last year to 24 this year, is a proof that the change has not been popular with the young people themselves.

This small little village, clinging to a windswept hill far out on the westernmost coast of France, keeps the old medieval traditions and ceremonies alive with solemn faith. Of all the customs followed by centuries of Bretons, none has been hit harder than the fixed January wedding day. To be married in the spring, as is the custom in other parts of France, brings a certain laxity in the social code that is sure to have a more or less permanent effect on the social status in the village of the persons concerned. Such a marriage is always referred to contemptuously as a summer wedding.

Like most of the Breton festivals, this common wedding day is about as old and discreditable an occasion as it can possibly be made. There are usually from 20 to 40 couples that come before the village priest for the ceremony. As each bride has four or five maids and each bridegroom an equal number of attendants, and as it is a very Plougastel etiquette for each person to comport himself with as much gloom of sorrow and contrition as possible, it will be seen that a wedding in Plougastel resembles nothing so much as a particularly tragic funeral.

Solemn Groups in Native Costume.

The friends of the young people come from all over Brittany, each wearing his or her own costume. An American woman, who by an unusual combination of circumstances happened to be in the neighborhood at the time of the wedding last year and who cherishes the experience as one of the most delightful incidents of much foreign travel, says that she has never seen anywhere in Europe so large a gathering of people wearing native costume, solemnly intent on religious observance and perfectly unconscious that they were performing an exceedingly picturesque spectacle.

Last year, said this woman, we pointed out a young man, who was the entire absence of unympathetic curiosity seekers whose presence has turned almost every peasant celebration of this kind in Europe into a show for the edification of tourists. The distance from Paris, the inaccessibility of the place, as well as the bleak, cheerless weather of the season, combine to make this queer wedding festival a thing that is practically unknown to ordinary tourists. I dare say that if the affair could be moved to a railroad center and the date changed to the summertime, it would be put down in the guide book with double stars. I also venture the opinion that within two years the festival would have become commercialized and would have lost all its simplicity and earnestness and charm.

As the wedding that I attended there were more than 2000 people, taxing the hospitality of the village to its utmost. In all that crowd I do not believe there were a dozen people who did not wear the Breton costume. Probably I was the only one there who looked on with the tourist's, and not the personal, point of view.

Marriage in Plougastel is a very practical matter for which the services of a bazilian, or professional matchmaker, are always necessary. The number of marriages that take place are regulated as much by his activity and energy as by the size of the previous season's catch of fish, or the yield of the harvest. It is the business of the bazilian to keep himself familiar with the habits and ambitions of all the young men of the community. As for the girls, he is less concerned with their dispositions than with the amount of dowry their parents may be expected to give with them. This dowry is rarely of money, or, except in unusually prosperous cases, of anything so valuable as a cow or horse. A girl may reasonably be expected to bring her husband a certain number of sheep or goats, and a supply of chickens or geese. Vegetables and fruits are often included in the regulations, which, it is needless to say, often last for days and weeks. They are conducted with a deliberation and fitness from which a pig dealer in a Cairo bazaar might get points.

No Geese No Marriage.

On one occasion a single goose blocked the success of the matchmaker's project. The father stood firm. So many geese would he give, and not one more. The would-be bridegroom argued, and the matchmaker raged, while the girl whose fate was involved looked on at the quarrel apparently unmoved. When the disappointed bridegroom took himself off with the last word, "No geese, no marriage," she went back to her work with the philosophic reflection that the next season would bring her better luck.

Another unfortunate failure that the present bazilian of Plougastel has had was due to the refusal of the father to agree to provide the young couple with a bushel of strawberries every year. The father pointed out the futility of the goat that was to be part of his daughter's portion, the particular distinction of the sheep that he had set apart for her, the size and youth of the hen that would accompany her to her new home, and the number and thickness of the wooden petticoats that filled her carved oak dowry chest. The groom admitted all these things, but held out for the strawberries as a matter of principle. The girl sided with her would-be husband and begged her father to yield. He was stubborn, however, and the negotiations fell through.

After the bazilian has finished his work and collected his fee, and after the papers have been signed at the notary's office, the bride-to-be must on no account make any display of the delight she feels at her escape from what is, in Plougastel, the most dreadful of fates—being an old maid. On the contrary she must go about clothed in the deepest gloom. It is a very serious offense against good taste for her to smile in public or show anything but misery at the mention of her coming marriage. Such an attitude in the eyes of her friends would indicate an unmanly willingness to wed.

Cheerful Wedding Song.

There is an old Breton wedding song that is always chanted by the bride as she leaves the church that expresses her correct attitude toward her future. It goes something like this:

I have thrown myself away.
I have exchanged a life of joy for one of pain.
Sorrow and trouble await me.
Now I am married and am nothing but a slave.
Then hasten all you who are yet free,
to the parish.
And enjoy life while ye may.
For me all joy is ended.
Farewell friends of my youth, farewell!

These cheerful ones, chanted in a minor key to a queer sing-song air, are the wedding hymn of every Plougastel girl, and do their part in maintaining a proper atmosphere of intense gloom. The old stone church makes an effort to be bright and cheerful for the wedding day. The altars are brilliant with candles, and the priest and his assistants wear their richest vestments. But the downcast, sorrowful faces of the brides and their attendants, who sit on one side of the church and the stern, solemn expressions of the bridegrooms on the other side, offset all these brave efforts. The white caps of the women, starched and folded after the manner that has been the latest fashion in Plougastel for three centuries, form a snowy billow in the dark building. Beneath the caps one may get glimpses of the gold and silver embroidery on the bodices, and the flash of color from the purple silk aprons, spread over the wide, full cloth skirts.

Four or Five Waistcoats.

The men's jackets, cut short at the waist, are dark blue or black, embroidered in gold, and are worn over four or five waistcoats of brilliant colors, red, green or orange, ornamented with rows of silver or steel buttons. Their hats are round and flat, with a velvet ribbon encircling the crown. This is caught in the back with a big silver buckle, and hangs down in two long, fluttering ends.

The couples are married in groups of three or four. Often, when the number is large, the church ceremony will last for two or three hours. When the time comes, the church is not in the best of humor. The priest, who has been waiting for the ceremony to begin, looks on with a weary expression. The couples, who have been waiting for their turn, look on with a weary expression. The guests, who have been waiting for the ceremony to begin, look on with a weary expression.

After the ceremony is over, the couples are married in groups of three or four. Often, when the number is large, the church ceremony will last for two or three hours. When the time comes, the church is not in the best of humor.

MISS BEATRICE CLUETT (LEFT), MRS. BRADBURY WILSON (RIGHT). The society people who are wintering at Palm Beach have gone in for tennis as a favorite pastime, and every day the courts are thronged. Mrs. Bradbury Wilson of Providence, R. I., has introduced the fad of playing tennis in a hobble skirt. Despite this handicap she gets around with great agility and comes out a winner in most of her matches. Another player of ability is Miss Beatrice Cluett, who appears on the courts attired in a costume of white duck and wears a broad-brimmed canvas hat to shade her face from the sun.

LATE SOCIETY NEWS

Luncheon at Acacia
Mrs. Samuel Garvin gave a delightful luncheon, yesterday noon, in the Dutch room at the Acacia hotel with covers laid for 8. There was a large table of daffodils on the center of the table and yellow predominated throughout.

The guests of honor were Mrs. Louis A. Giddings and Mrs. Frederick A. Faust and the compliment was paid them as Mrs. Giddings leaves this week for California and Mrs. Faust will go abroad in the near future. At the suggestion of the hostess, the ladies brought far-well letters in either prose or rhyme to be enclosed with a souvenir selected by Mrs. Garvin. It was requested that Mrs. Giddings keep her package unopened until she is on the desert, and Mrs. Faust, until she is on the ocean.

Mrs. Garvin's guests were Mrs. Giddings, Mrs. Faust, Mrs. Martin Slaughter, Mrs. H. D. Shackelford, Miss Leslie Aiken, Mrs. Arthur G. Sharp, Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge and Mrs. Harry Ver Steeg.

To Meet Mrs. Hagerman
Mrs. William F. Greenwood, 1727 North Cascade avenue, charmingly entertained a party of ladies at luncheon, yesterday, to meet Mrs. J. J. Hagerman of Roswell, N. M. Daffodils beautified the living room and pink tulips were used in the dining room. Covers were laid for 10.

Circle Entertained
The members of the sewing circle of Glen Eyrie chapter No. 5, O. E. S., were entertained by Mrs. Gertrude Park and Mrs. Offie J. Smith, in the home of the latter, 222 Colorado avenue, Friday afternoon. The guests numbering about 50 were each given a square of white cloth and tape with the request that they make from memory a Masonic apron to be presented to the circle.

Mrs. Mabel Van Dyke, Kentucky's new United States commissioner, has entered into her new judicial office with a dignity that has gained the respect of the people of the state. Already Judge Bell has passed upon the cases of numerous offenders against the United States government, and so far all the offenders brought before her have been adjudged guilty by their fair judge. Twenty-five years of age, pretty and the proud mother of two little boys, the Mrs. Judge Bell at her desk is vastly different from the Judge Bell in the court room. Her bearing on the bench does not inspire one with a desire to commit any crime.

Colorado Springs F. W. C.

The March meeting of the Colorado Springs Federation of Women's clubs held yesterday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. rooms in the DeWitt building was in the form of a delightful musical. There was a large attendance and in entertaining those present, Mrs. Wesley S. Steele, the president, was assisted by Mrs. Ida M. Hamilton, Miss Flansburg and other members of the federation. The excellent program was presented by Miss Evelyn Lennox, pianist, Miss Jennie Pinckney, soprano, and Miss Hattie May Bennett, reader.

The program, entire, was as follows:

Piano Solo—Wienkelt's "Mourning" by Harriet Schütz, accompanied by Mendelssohn.

Reading—Moriah's Mourning, by Ruth McEnery Stuart.

Vocal Solo—Where My Song With Wings Provided, by Hahn.

If No One Ever Marries Me, by Liza Lehmann.

Miss Jennie Pinckney.

Miss Lennox, Accompanist.

Suits Are Most Attractive in Every Respect

WHILE suits are most attractive in every respect, they are also the most practical. They are the principal element in the wardrobe of the modern man.

Some splendid values, really special at $10 to $20. Pleats of the highest priced ones up to $12.50.

We've Lots of Inexpensive But New Dresses

NEW styles made of good materials, trimmed in new ways, suited for wearing afternoons, or down town. The fabrics include chiffon, tulle, messaline and silk or wool serges. Macramé lace—that new heavy lace—adorns many of them. $10 to $15.

A Special Taffeta Silk Dress, in shepherd checks and stripes—good colors, specially priced at $6.75

Something New in Trimmings

NEWLY received—white and tan, 44 inches wide, at $2 a yard. An attractive novelty—distinctive enough for the most original dresser. —All-overs and band—great variety but mostly fine styles. Shadow lace effects and the heavy macramé white to the deep ecru shades. —In silk or linen fringe we have nearly every color—also blacks and whites.

Standard Embroideries

A NEW magazine showing all about embroidery, crochet, etc., with complete instructions. Beautifully illustrated and printed. A big, full size magazine, or fifty pages everyone of great interest. Each copy contains TWO TRANSFER PATTERNS—a waist and a collar. The first issue now on sale at our pattern counter at 15c.

REARITY AS A PROFESSION

From the New York Sun.
If there were no dust particles in the air there would be no rain, hail or snow. From a perfectly dustless atmosphere the moisture would descend in ceaseless rain without drops. The dust particles, which are invisible to the naked eye, serve as nuclei about which the vapor gathers. The snow crystal is the most beautiful creation of the aerial moisture and the hailstone is the most extraordinary. The heart of every hailstone is a tiny atom of dust. Such an atom, with a little moisture condensed about it, is the germ from which may grow a hailstone capable of falling a man or smashing a house. But first it must be caught up by a current of air and carried to the level of the lofty cirrus clouds, five or six or even 10 miles high. Then, continually growing by fresh accretions of moisture, it begins its long plunge to earth, spinning through the clouds and flashing in the sun like a diamond bolt shot from a rainbow.

THE WHY OF GENIUS

Gertrude Atherton.
Did any great genius ever come into the world after commonplace prenatal conditions? Was a maker of history ever born amidst pleasant, harmonious, satisfied domesticity? Did a woman with no wisdom in her blood ever inform a brain with electric fire? The students of history know that while mothers of many great men have been virtuous, none have been commonplace and few have been

BEAUTY AS A PROFESSION

From the New York Sun.
Beauty as a life work is no good. The old adage declares it to be, but skin deep anyway and, like all other skin games, the person who backs it too heavily finally loses. It's too thin to stand the test of years, and we are always finding little pieces in the new—away down in the corner where we're telling of some noted beauty of former years who has just crashed in her check in some out of the way poorhouse.

REVERE YOUR MOTHER

From the New York Weekly.

One matter which all young girls should consider, which is, perhaps, almost hackneyed and yet never unnecessary, is the question of reverence—all that is implied by the injunction, to honor your parents. To honor them is not only to obey them, it goes farther and deeper than mere obedience.

You cannot possibly understand the love that your mother bears you, it is a law of nature that you should not understand. It is like no other love, peculiarly interwoven with every fiber of her being, not to be comprehended by any daughter of you all until the day when you perhaps hold your own children in your arms. You must take it on trust. But remember that this love of hers makes her acutely conscious of every touch of hardness and coldness in your voice; she misses the kiss that you are in too great a hurry to bestow, she winces at the argumentative tones which you labor to set your own way, she dreads unspoken to lose your affection and respect. Therefore, do not begrudge the tender word, the long caress, even if you feel a little impatient all the while. You may long for it with a heart sick longing when it can never be yours again. And remember that harshness is one of the faults of youth; you should strive against it as much as you strive against your faults of bad temper, or indolence.

Appleton, Wis.—"I take pleasure in writing you an account of my sickness. I told a friend of mine how I felt and she said I had female trouble and advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she had taken it herself for the same trouble with wonderful results. I had been sick for two years and overworked myself and had such a time of it that I could hardly walk for a few days. I was very nervous and easily tired out and could not sleep nights. I had dizzy spells and dangles in my face. But I have taken your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has worked like a charm. I think it is the best medicine in existence."

—The Chicago M. R., 1161 E. Adams St., Appleton, Wis.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRATITUDE:

G. S. L., La.—"I have been teaching school for some years and I have enjoyed my work very much. I have been very busy with my work and I have been very busy with my work and I have been very busy with my work."

A COLORADO GIRL'S CASE:

Mrs. M. C. L., Colo.—"I was troubled for some time with irregular periods. I was very nervous and easily tired out and I was very nervous and easily tired out and I was very nervous and easily tired out."

Is it not reasonable to suppose that a medicine that did so much for these girls will do for any other girl who is suffering with the same troubles?

Does it not seem a little strange thing to give such a medicine at first a trial? You may be sure that it will do you no harm, and that there are lots of proof that it will do you much good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is sold by all druggists and by mail order. Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lowell, Mass., for advice. A later will be sent you if you will send me your name and address.

The Marriage Proposal

By Laura Jean Libbey

Napoleon and Josephine

WHERE shall I propose? in the park during the evening as we sit on the bench clasping hands, in the parlor when the family have retired and only the ticking of the clock can hear what we have to say?

Shall I ask her when we are driving along the country roads, enjoying the balmy spring air? Shall I ask her to be my wife when we are out motoring, whispering my proposal to her in the darkness of the twilight?

Or, shall I get an airship or a balloon and bid her away into the clouds and ask for her hand there?

It is quite true that the proposal's successful termination depends largely upon the place and manner in which it is made. I am sure of this, after reading with deep interest those words of letters from lovers telling me their trials and desires.

And I think the marriage proposal is the most interesting phase of human life from the first school day love affair to the grave—through youthful affection, mature love and aged veneration. The proposal is symbolic of all that is pure and noble in love.

A couple of sentences well chosen and sincerely uttered are more effective than all the flowery speeches that were ever prepared for the ears of susceptible maidens.

If words do not come too quickly, if a man does not seem too confident, if he seems doubtful of his success, he is more likely to gain a woman's consent than the overconfident suitor. For although the womanly woman does not want a man who is not manly and strong, she does not care for the conceited fellow who is too sure of her.

Girl's Greatest Honor.

Whatever other rules for proposing a man ignores, he should be sure to avoid appearing ridiculous in the eyes of his sweetheart when declaring his love. If a woman really loves a man, the fact that he stumbled into the room or forgot to leave his hat and gloves in the hall on the eventful evening he came to propose will not change her feeling for him. But a man should remember that his proposal remains fresh in a woman's memory years after they are married over his cherished treasures, so he should take care that it be a dignified, sweet occasion which his bride can look back to with a feeling unimpaired with amputation.

Girls, you must remember that a man does you the greatest honor he can possibly offer when he asks you to be his wife. Help him along. It is not an easy matter to "pop the question." In the main, young men must trust their actions to credit us, but a few hints might help along. Look back over the pages of history and see how the world's famous people proposed—and how they won.

—Hardly a day goes by that I do not receive a letter from some young man asking me how to propose to a girl.

One comes to that he is so carried away by his feelings that he cannot tether with a conventional courtship. He knows that he is in love with the girl and he wants to cut the matter short by proposing.

Another tells me that he is only 21, he knows that he is too young, and the girl is just 17. But in spite of this, he cannot wait and he cannot give her up for he knows he will never be happy with any one else. Then he asks me to call native to a young man who has met a girl with wealth and position. He is so carried away by her wealth and position, and attention he mistakes these qualities for love. In all these inquiries I would say that love is a great, steady force, but, like a splendid river, it has a steady course. It does not tumble and plunge like a cataract or a waterfall. It flows steadily on from its source.

In looking back over history we find that the proposals made by the principals in famous love affairs are the most interesting of the entire romance. The proposal is a blossoming out of all that is pure and noble in true love. It is the world's love in its every shape and form.

I have read and reread the love stories of queens and heroes, and I found that the most pivotal point of their affairs lay in the marriage proposal.

Queen Mary's Proposals.

Queen Mary of Scotland was cold, haughty, and seductive. When a young girl she was moved by two powers. One was courage, and the other was the love of love. At 15 she was subtle, clever and ambitious. She told her ladies in waiting that she was the happiest when listening to love poems and love songs. She wanted love more than a throne and a crown. She hoped the ideal man would come soon to claim her hand, but she added she could only love a strong man, one who had plenty of manly courage.

Though Bothwell was somewhat of a roisterer, he had the other qualities for which the daring Mary had been looking. So she no longer laid eyes on him but she confessed that he was the lover she had been reading about and looking for. Because of court ambitions she was unable to gratify her feeling, and less than a year she found herself a widow. Then Mary felt more than ever the need of some one to lean on.

Queen Elizabeth of England, getting wind of the fact that Mary was considering a second marriage, hastily sent Darnley, her own favorite, to the Scotch queen's court. Mary fell madly in love with him almost at first sight. It was not two weeks before the whole court was talking of her infatuation for him. He was a tall and athletic youth of 19. He had been carefully trained in music, dancing, and the many graceful accomplishments of the day. His attendance on Queen Elizabeth had given him an easy and graceful manner.

It is not surprising that Mary found his company more enjoyable than that of the Scottish nobles in her court, for although some of them were handsome their manners were from the rough and unpolished.

While courting Mary at Sterling Darnley fell ill. Mary had become so interested in him and was so anxious for his recovery that she nursed him herself. As she watched his sufferings her heart became softer toward him. It grieved her to see this man, who had been so fine and strong, weak and helpless as a child. With the tenderest care and devotion she nursed him back to health, and it is supposed while the two sat together talking during his convalescence, Darnley spoke to her of his love and asked her to become his wife. Mary accepted. She was so sure that she no longer loved Bothwell that she sent for him and commanded him to marry a girl from the great house of Gordon.

All went well until Darnley shrank from the hardships of battle. Bothwell proved himself the braver. She had dreamed about her feeling of love had turned to hate. She had been dining with Rizzio in a small chamber, and Darnley held her by the waist while Rizzio was sitting before her eyes. After this Mary summoned Bothwell before her time and again, and she usually explained in these impassioned words: "In such I love Scotland and England both, I shall have him for my own."

One's Power Through Love.

Then came the casket letters, which are among the most impassioned letters ever written by a woman to a man. This lasted until Bothwell fled from Scotland.

As it has been truly said: "Had Mary been less ambitious when she first met Bothwell or had he been a little bolder they might have reigned happily together and lived out their lives in the plenitude of that great love which held them both in thrall."

But a queen is not as other women, and she found too late that the teaching of her heart was, after all, the truest teaching.

If a woman uses her strength and courage to the right end she not alone can show a man what love means in the making of his career, but she often turns his failures into splendid successes.

Maria Antoinette, the charming Austrian princess, was only 14 when she accepted the rich prince of France, Louis XVI, and she was only 15 when she became his wife.

Though at the proposal she was far too young to have any real conception of what love means, she would have learned if her husband had been the right kind of husband. But the daughter of France was too busy hunting, working at locksmithing, and flirting with his ladies at court actually to win the love of his child wife.

Laura Jean Libbey

Light hearted was Pauline Bonaparte, the sister of Napoleon, considered one of the handsomest women in Europe. She was so beautiful that the great Italian sculptor Canova was honored to represent her as Venus in marble. She loved to flirt and break as many hearts as she could, self-satisfied with the fact that she was beautiful and Napoleon's sister.

Napoleon Becomes Disgusted.

Finally, Napoleon became so disgusted with her many flirtations that he offered her to Gen. de Harcourt. This able general refused this overture with some such tactful words as these: "I know that she is charming and exquisitely beautiful, yet I have dreams of domestic happiness of nobility and virtue. Such dreams are seldom realized, I know. Still, I am in hopes of winning them."

Napoleon then offered her to Gen. Leclerc, who was flattered by the king's overture.

I believe had no desire to settle down with any one man, but she consoled herself in the knowledge that she had flirted with nearly all of Napoleon's great generals, and comforted herself by saying that her suitor was rich and had good manners. He really loved Pauline and tried to teach her what love should mean to a woman.

When he went to Haiti to quell an uprising she refused to go among savages, and finally Napoleon forced her on board by having her carried in a litter.

The expedition was a failure, and her husband was taken ill and died there, but Pauline was too busy flirting to be worried about this incident.

When she returned home Napoleon made her wear black and respect the conventionalities of mourning.

She soon announced her engagement to a friend, a dandy, Dorghees, with whom she had been flirting for many years. She confessed that it was done because she disliked her sister-in-law, Josephine, and was anxious to show herself before her in a handsome green velvet gown and with splendid jewels dazzling about her neck.

She cared equally little for her second husband until she was dying. She invited him to her room and asking a maid to bring her a mirror, said: "See, I am not afraid to die, for I am still beautiful."

Robert Burns belonged to the class of men who think that they are in love long before they have reached manhood. But their folly teaches them that infatuation is one thing and love is another. They learn by sad experience that there is as much difference between the two as night and day, as between the cold, shimmering moon and the splendid, life giving sun.

Falls in Love Easily.

Robert Burns had his first experience in what he termed "falling desperately in love" when he was only 14 years of age. The girl was called "Handsome Nell." This was a doting fancy, but when he met Jean Armour, the daughter of a mason, love took a more serious turn.

He wished to marry her, but her parents would not bear of it, so the careless poet spent his time writing, plowing, and making love to many others.

In this interval he was busy making love to Mary Campbell, his "Highland Mary," and a number of others. He thought he loved his

Mary and Darnley

Highland Mary as much as any man could love a woman, and wrote some of his most beautiful verses to her, until he met a Mrs. Wheelwright, who had been deserted by her husband at the age of 17.

It is often said that Napoleon had too many worldly ambitions to understand love. But, like most ambitious men, he coveted love more than most things. He had not the time to study its meaning, and craved, or it, in its fullest sense, when it was too late. After he married Josephine he had little time and inclination to confess that he loved her, but when misfortunes came he saw that she was the one woman that he had really loved. It was when this beautiful widow of Eugene Beauharnais came to Paris that he fell desperately in love. The manner of their first meeting was romantic.

On the first anniversary of the Viscount de Beauharnais' death Josephine gave her son, Eugene, his father's picture and sword. These the little lad proudly hung up in his own room. One day, on returning from school, Eugene was heartbroken to learn that this precious sword had been forcibly removed. He immediately sped to the Tuilleries, where he eloquently pleaded with Bonaparte for its restitution. Touched by the boy's love, Bonaparte restored the weapon and treated him so kindly that Josephine felt that she should call and thank the officer who had been so kind to her son.

Flattered by the visit of this graceful woman, who bore an old and aristocratic name, Bonaparte soon returned her call and, having fallen violently in love with her at first sight, began to woo her with all the impetuous ardor of his nature.

He managed to see her almost every day. He secured invitations to all entertainments which she was likely to attend. He spent many an evening with her in her little boudoir. Meeting her at all the fashionable salons, and assuming that she must be as prosperous as she appeared, Bonaparte, although dependent upon his army pay only, urged her to marry him. He fell entirely under her spell. His passion for Josephine became so intense that nothing else but the possession of her seemed of any consequence to him.

Bonaparte's family was greatly opposed to the match and Josephine's two children also objected, at first. At that time Josephine was not in love with Bonaparte but merely flattered by his devotion. The result was, however, that, unable to resist Bonaparte's energetic wooing, Josephine finally consented to marry him.

Napoleon Turns to Austria.

Napoleon was more in love with Josephine than ever when he divorced her, at his ambition meant more to him and his people than any love he could ever know. "This time he would marry to satisfy his ambition and it, an heir instead of love, so he made overtures to the sister of the Czar of Russia, but Alexander distrusted him and succeeded in evading his request. Flashed by this refusal, he next turned to Austria, as one of the great powers."

Prince Metternich favored the suggestion and the courtship moved rapidly. Marie Louise could not conceive of Napoleon as her lover, for she had always hated France and thought of Napoleon as a rough, cruel soldier.

These were her thoughts when her father told her that Napoleon had honored her by asking for her hand and the offer had been accepted.

She was beautiful and as elegant as she was beautiful. Her father spent a whole day trying to convince her that she was to have real love from this rough courageous soldier and when words proved futile he won her by flattery, giving her wonderful gifts, costly entertainments, and making her believe that she was already the wife of the great Napoleon.

At the little village of Courcelles Napoleon met the courier who was riding before her carriage. When his eyes met those of the beautiful Austrian he was thrilled with what he thought was love, but the fair, modest girl knew she had been sacrificed to ambition. Napoleon had not the qualities that could ever awaken love in her soul.

There are men whose lives are dominated from beginning to end by a feeling of love and a desire to love. But they are too hot tempered and impulsive to sit down and analyze their feelings and ask themselves if they are really in love, and are they steady and dispassionate enough to love honestly and sincerely after marriage.

Byron Saw Mistake.

Byron was uneducated in the lasting ideas of love, though love dominated his whole career. When a child he had his first love affair with a little girl, Mary Duff, and then he became enamored of his lovely cousin, Margaret Parker, who died before she reached womanhood.

He had a half dozen other romantic episodes before he met Anna Isabella, the only child of Sir Ralph Milbanke. The first time they met he confessed his love, but she was too wise to be carried away by his looks and words of praise and she cut short his love-making. Then he fell desperately in love with another lady, who told him the same story. Then he renewed his courting with Miss Milbanke, and he bothered her so much that she finally consented to accept his offer.

Byron seemed to have a premonition that they were making a terrible mistake, during the ceremony he trembled like an aspen leaf and he said to have answered the clergyman's questions all wrong. After their first infant was born Lady Byron took the child on a visit to her father and refused to return to her husband. At last he went abroad, trying to forget his short and unhappy marriage, when suddenly he came upon a beautiful young woman, Teresa, daughter of Count Gamba of Ravenna, who when only 10 years of age had married Guiccioli. This lovely blonde with rich yellow hair was madly in love with Byron's beautiful face and winning manners. He was flattered by her overtures, and a desperate courtship began there and then.

The explanation of her conduct is best given in the words she spoke to Byron: "I had always thought of love as an amusement, yet now I have become its slave."

The husband brought this ardent love-making to an end by carrying his wife back to Venice, and still Byron continued to write her the most ardent and wonderful love letters.

Can You Sew?

If you can you are not like most of the young women who are fast becoming the housewives of the present generation.

There was a time when all the women in the household worked at the spinning wheel and learned to use the needle.

But now-a-days it's different.

Today the young women have their hands full with the numerous parties, dances and receptions which fall to the lot of the maiden of this social age.

And strange to say the young women who require the most dresses are least able to sew them for themselves.

So you see there is a real demand for your services if you know only a little about sewing.

If you wish to test this, just write out a want ad and insert it in tomorrow's paper. You will soon have all the work you will have time to attend to.

It is one of the most profitable ways in which you can add to the family pocketbook. Try it.

Our Guaranteed "Lost Ads"

ATTENTION! LAND PROMOTERS
Big snap in 10,000 acres of Colorado land, offered at half present actual value in order to settle an estate, improved, fenced, some orchard, lot of fine hay land, all can be irrigated through pumping good underflow, 6 to 20 feet, completed a reservoir, and some ditched, price $10 per acre, $25,000 to $25,000 cash will handle it. Party who has made thorough investigation and knows the land business says $250,000 can readily be cleared up on this project through subdividing and selling out in small lots. If you are in a position to handle or place such a proposition as this need answer Address "M" Box 233, City.

Campbell Morgan's Lesson Helps for Sunday School Teachers

Brief, Practical and Valuable Comments on the International Sunday School Lessons for the Year 1911.
By G. CAMPBELL MORGAN, D. D.

JESUS THE HEALER

Golden Text—Matthew viii. 17. Himself took our infirmities, and bare our diseases."

Mark i. 29-35. Matthew ix. 1-13.

(29) And straightway, when they were come out of the synagogue, they came into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John also. Now Simon's sister-in-law was sick, lying in bed.
Now Simon and Andrew went in and took her, and laid her on the bed.

(32) And at even, when the sun had set, they brought unto him all that were sick, and them that were vexed with devils. And all the city was gathered together at the door.

(33) And he healed many that were sick with divers diseases, and with divers infirmities, and cast out many devils.

(34) And he went into a town called Bethsaida. And there were certain men, which were of the synagogue, which said, "He does many signs and wonders here."

(35) And he answered and said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the synagogues of their towns."

(36) And he said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the synagogues of their towns."

(37) And he said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the
synagogues of their towns."

(38) And he said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the
synagogues of their towns."

(39) And he said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the
synagogues of their towns."

(40) And he said unto them, "I will go thence, and I will preach in the
synagogues of their towns."

their illustration of this fact. The one in Matthew declares explicitly that he healed "all manner of disease and all manner of sickness among the people,"
and as though that was not enough, the evangelist declared that they brought unto him "all that were sick with divers diseases and with divers infirmities, and he healed them." The passage in Mark is equally clear, as it first records a definite case of his healing of fever and of a fever and shivering, then of a girl of her father, and finally of a man of his hand and foot, and between the two of that general exercise of healing power to which Matthew also referred in the synagogue record.

That which is especially noticeable in all these accounts of our Lord's healing power is the absence of effort, either real or seemingly, on the part of the patient, and the fact that the healing power was never used in any case where the patient was not brought to him in a state of complete helplessness.

The Magic Talking Box

It Was Only 34 Years Ago That Thomas A. Edison, Then Comparatively Unknown, Astonished the World With the Declaration That He Had Made a Machine That Could Talk

From the Kansas City Star.

A little good sound. Mrs. Melba begins to sing. Kibbelik is playing his violin. Landon Ronald is the accompanist. They are in a little dingy theater in London, overlooking dripping streets and smoking chimneys, but the music they are making will be heard around the world. It is possible by means of the talking machine.

It was just 34 years ago that Thomas
A. Edison filed at Washington his patent for the phonograph. There have been many improvements since, but the instrument is fundamentally the same as it was when he conceived it.

The invention of the phonograph was not an accident, as so many have attributed it. It was the result of careful study. It was made while Edison was seated near a ticking telegraph instrument. Here is where most of his inventions are conceived under the inspiration of the constant tick, click or the mysterious buzz. And it is fitting that this should be because the telegraph was Edison's first love. It was the instrument that led him into the world of sound.

A Work Saver, His Idea.
Edison sought to make a device that would record the telegraph messages.
He would lessen work. He went to work experimenting with a revolving plate over which he placed some tinfoil. One idea brought out another, and soon he was asking himself: Why not make a machine that will reproduce the human voice?

Edison didn't ask himself out loud.
He was young then and someone might have heard the absurd statement and have had him tried for insanity. He kept his own counsel for a few days.
He bought some raw material, costing $15, and gave it to John Kruesel, his assistant, telling him how he wanted the things shaped. Kruesel was working on the machine, and Edison was working. He hoped it would work, because whenever Edison was successful in his inventions he shared his fortune with his workmen.

After the machine was completed, and incidentally after Edison had spent five days and as many sleepless nights working on it, he told Kruesel
what the machine was for.
"Listen, Kruesel," he said, "I want you to make a machine that will reproduce the human voice."

"Impossible," he said, "a foolish waste of time and money."
"We will see," said Edison, and at the same time he walked before the trumpet of the machine.

Mary had a little lamb
His fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

That was what he spoke into the trumpet. He moved the gear, turned a few screws, then said:
"Now listen, Kruesel."

The result was astounding to the German helper. If he had not known Edison, he could not have believed his ears.
The world was equally nonplussed.
A few days later when the announcement was given out that Edison had invented a box that would talk, an instantaneous change took place. The world was now talking.

the human voice. Demographers soon carried phonographs to every city and exhibited them. Orders came fast and a factory was taxed to its limit to supply the demand.

But it must not be supposed that Edison turned out a finished machine,
the same phonograph we have today,
at the very first. It took years to develop it. Nearly every year since there have been improvements added.
But the marvelous invention stands Marvellous scarcely characterizes it, for today we have this machine that not only reproduces one voice, but as well as a dozen, or a whole band.

For instance, in that little room in London, where the three noted musicians gather, the machine records the movements of Melba's lips, the touch of Kibbelik's fingers over the piano keys.
All these things are recorded and reproduced by the fine point of the stylus, not a needle for each sound or note. Posterity, the millions of unborn in years to come, can listen to this beautiful music and enjoy it even as we do today.

Edison says the invention is simple.
The principle on which the phonograph is built is that every sound sets the atmosphere in vibration. This produces a certain effect on the air. When we say "mother," the printed word is not sent to our ear, but simply the vibration of air, the sound, and in our own minds we convert these vibrations into the word "mother."

So all the vibrations of sound made by a singer's voice, by a pianist, and a violinist, mingle in one continuous and varying undulation, enter the brass funnel of the machine, the same as our trumpet, and the stylus makes impressions according to the vibration.

After the impressions have been made another needle is inserted to retrace in these impressions, the disk is made to revolve again and words come from the inanimate piece of machinery.
What makes words come from these mechanical records is a question that even Edison cannot answer.

WATER POWER
SITES WITHDRAWN
Water-power site reserves were created in Arizona, California, Idaho, Oregon and Utah during January by presidential proclamation, as recommended by the United States Geological survey, covering 5,111 acres. This action was taken in furtherance of the policy of withdrawing all public lands found on examination to possess value as power sites, pending legislation by congress to allow development by lease-ing or otherwise. The total withdrawals outstanding on January 21, 1912, embraced 1,726,216 acres, including thousands of power sites.

During January, 2,375 acres previously withdrawn were, on further examination, restored to entry as having no value for the development of power.
The original withdrawals of power-site lands, as recommended by the engineers of the survey, are invariably made as small as possible, but where more detailed field examination shows that they can be further cut down without affecting the interests of the public such reductions are immediately restored to the public domain. Thus, of the nearly 2,000,000 acres which have been withdrawn during the last four years for power sites, 144,433 acres have been so restored.

What Do You Think of Yourself?

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

Never mind what the world says — outsiders can't possibly get all the facts concerning your case.

We can only estimate your performances, we must form our opinions from the best information available.

Our idea of you is bound to be inaccurate; but you're on the "inside"; you're aware of all the circumstances in your career you have the complete record.

You know why and where and how you rose or fell, made good or welched, played the game or cheated, fought a good fight or turned tail.

Your references, your rating, your reputation, are not based upon such exact data.

We must accept you with a grain of salt, but you are not entitled to seasoning.

You were present at every mean, hard, crooked, selfish, sneaking event in your career and you must admit them to evidence.

Come now, proceed with your cross examination.

Are you worthy of the esteem in which you are held?

Do you deserve the respect which is accorded you?

Are you the real owner of all your money?

How often has accident intervened to save you from the hand of the law?

Did you ever betray friendship in the name of profit?

Are all your debts of gratitude paid in full?

What ideas have you stolen and applied to your own advantage?

Count the times when envy or cupidity led you to blacken a good name.

How many men and women wear the stain of opprobrium because of your contemptible tongue?

Have your charities been inspired by actual kindness of heart, or have you bestowed them solely because of the publicity you could derive therefrom?

Are you orderly and decent by instinct, or does the dread of detection alone hold you in restraint?

Drop your mask for one hour and meet yourself stripped of the makeup in which you strut before your audience.

How do you like the picture would you be willing to have us share the view? Are you an impostor?

Are your best wares all in your show window?

Do you display goods that you cannot deliver?

Are there any cobwebs on your heart or smudges on your soul? Is your mind soiled?

Clean up, and get your stock in order. The Keeper of the Eternal Records has inventoried your real assets; if you are ashamed of His rating, make haste and settle with your creditors now!

Conscience will tell you what you owe.

The Achievements of Luther Trant

BY EDWIN BALMER and WILLIAM MACHARG.

IV The Private Bank Puzzle

"I have come to ask you to do, perhaps as much for me."

"Two months ago, Mr. Trant, our bank suffered its first default, under circumstances which affected the cashier very strongly. A few weeks later father had to go to Europe for his health, leaving me with old Gordon, the cashier in charge of things. At most immediately a series of disorders commenced, little annoyances and persecutions against the cashier. Twenty minutes ago he came to me, trembling with anxiety, to tell me that they mean that one of the men in the office is trying to rob the safe. I feel confident that it is only Gordon's nervousness, but in the absence of my father I feel that I cannot let the matter go longer unexplained."

"What are these apparently trivial things which have been going on for the last month, Mr. Howell?"

"They are so insignificant that I am almost ashamed to tell you. The papers in Gordon's waste-basket have been disturbed. Some one takes his pads and blotters. His coat, which hangs on a hook in his office, disappeared and was brought back again. An old pocketbook that he keeps in his desk, which never contains anything of importance, has been taken away and brought back in the same manner. And this morning, when he found some one had been trying to break into an old typewriter desk in his office—though it was entirely empty, even the typewriter having been taken out of it two days ago—he went absolutely to pieces, and made the statement about robbing the safe which I have just repeated to you."

"Tell me, Trant, demanded, 'what was the defalcation in the bank, which so greatly affected your cashier just before your father left for Europe?'"

"Ten thousand dollars was taken, in plain words stolen outright by young Robert Gordon, the cashier—William Gordon's son."

"The cashier's son," Trant replied with interest.

"His only son," Howell confirmed. "A boy about 25. Gordon has a daughter older."

"And the particulars?" Trant requested.

"It was a perfectly clear case against Robert," the banker replied. "Our bank has a South Side branch on Cottage-Grove avenue, near Fifty-first street, for the use of our keepers and merchants in the neighborhood. On September 29 they telephoned us that there was a sudden demand for currency resembling a run on the bank. Our regular manager, with the officer who accompanies him, was out; so Gordon called his son to carry the money from the safe, $25,000—$14,000 in small bills and $11,000 in two small packets of 10 $500 bills apiece. He himself counted it into the bag, locked it, and sealed it in. We all told the boy

"The safe, he said."

"Is it absolutely out of the question that the cashier held back the missing bills?"

"And ruined his own son, Mr. Trant? Impossible! But you do not have to take my opinion for that. The older Gordon returned the money—all of it, though he had no need to make up the amount. Out of regard for the father, who was nearbroken, we did not prosecute the boy. But you can see how deep all this must have affected Gordon, and it may be enough to account fully for his nervousness under the petty annoyances which have since since on ever since."

"Annoyed," cried Trant, "you mean almost immediately after this first defalcation in 45 years? But how, or may not be possible. But how, if it is convenient, I would like to go with you to the bank, Mr. Howell, at once?"

"It was not quite a week ago that the men entered the building where Howell & Son had had their offices for 35 years. Trant hurried on, and went up to the big banking room on the second floor. The arrangement of the room was still, solid, old-fashioned. The massive safe, set into a wall, especially attracted Trant's attention. He passed before its open door and, with a quick, imperious gesture, ordered the man in the room to get out of the way. He was still half-dressed, and he was still looking at the safe when the man in the room entered. He was still looking at the safe when the man in the room entered. He was still looking at the safe when the man in the room entered."

"It is as old as the bank and the building," Howell answered. "It is one of the Buttrickhouse six-story corner block."

"See the combination, I suppose," Trant said.

"Yes, a word of six letters, changed every Monday."

"And given to—"

"The cashier," Howell answered. "The cashier's son, I mean."

"What is Gordon's position?" Trant asked.

"He is the cashier's son, I mean," Howell answered. "The cashier's son, I mean."

"Trant reached forward, swiftly seized the cashier's thin wrist and lifted his hand forcibly from the desk."

"The straps were five in number and upon them, as Gordon had arranged them, were printed in pencil mere meaningless equations. The first, which was written on two of the straps, read:

"The second, torn into three pieces, was even more enigmatical, reading:

"But the pieces appeared to be properly put together and Trant noted that, besides the two and three pieces fitting, all the scraps evidently belonged together and had originally formed a part of a large sheet of paper, which had been torn and thrown away."

"There are nothing—nothing," Mr. Howell said. "The man tried to wrench the scraps from my hand, starting in terror at the man, or may not be possible. But how, if it is convenient, I would like to go with you to the bank, Mr. Howell, at once?"

"The man tried to wrench the scraps from my hand, starting in terror at the man, or may not be possible. But how, if it is convenient, I would like to go with you to the bank, Mr. Howell, at once?"

Rubber Growing in the Malay States

Fortune made in the industry and thousands of acres not yet in bearing

RUBBER is the most important of the products of the Malay peninsula. It is the only product of the tropics which has been developed to such an extent that it is now one of the leading exports of the world. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

The first rubber tree was planted in the Malay peninsula in 1847, and it was not until 1877 that the first rubber plantation was established. Since that time, the rubber industry has grown rapidly, and it is now one of the most important industries of the Malay peninsula. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

FIRST WORK AT SINGAPORE.
The first tree to be tapped regularly was those planted in the first botanical gardens of Singapore. Henry H. Ridley, director of the gardens, was the first to tap the tree. He was in charge of the Botanic Gardens at Penang in 1847, and he was the first to tap the tree in 1847. He was in charge of the Botanic Gardens at Penang in 1847, and he was the first to tap the tree in 1847. He was in charge of the Botanic Gardens at Penang in 1847, and he was the first to tap the tree in 1847.

Meanwhile a large number of rubber trees had been sent to the Straits Settlements and Borneo, the climate of which is very similar to the climate of the Amazon. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

RUBBER IN MALAY PENINSULA.
The home of Para rubber, the highest grade of the product, is in northern Brazil on the Amazon. A rubber subject to almost any place with a very warm, humid temperature. In cultivating rubber the greatest success has been achieved in the forests and in the open country near the coast. The Malay peninsula is a very fertile country, and it is very well suited to the cultivation of rubber. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

RAPID GROWTH OF RUBBER TREES.
Any one who visits Singapore should not fail to see the rubber plantations in the island. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

PREPARING LAND FOR RUBBER.
In preparing land for rubber culture it is very important not only to clear the land but to dig out the roots of trees and stumps. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

the soil. The rubber is now in a sheet, white in color, which is passed through a rolling machine. Then it goes to the smoke house, which changes it to the dirty brown color that everyone is familiar with. Some of the rubber companies use the smoking process, which takes out rubber in the form of a fine, lace-like sheet.

COST OF A RUBBER PLANTATION.
A virgin soil in good rubber districts of the Malay peninsula may be bought for $5 an acre but it costs at least $25 an acre to clear and plant the land. Rubber plantations with three or four years old are selling at from $200 to $250 an acre. The revenue from a good rubber plantation is very large, but the unfortunate feature of the industry in the Malay peninsula is that the plantations were overcapitalized and they now find themselves with the full price of rubber, unable to pay dividends to stockholders. The price of rubber is now at a low level, and the plantations are in a very bad state of affairs. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

POOR STEAMER SERVICE.
Penang is the most northerly settlement of the Malay peninsula, and it is the most important port of the region. The steamer service is very poor, and it is very difficult to get to Penang. The rubber tree is a native of the Amazon basin in South America, and it was first introduced into the Malay peninsula by a Portuguese trader in the sixteenth century. It was at first used for the manufacture of shoes and other articles, but it was not until the middle of the nineteenth century that it was discovered that the latex of the tree could be used for the manufacture of rubber. This discovery led to the development of the rubber industry in the Malay peninsula, and it has since become one of the most important industries of the region.

of travel is uncertain and that it would not pay to give first-class service. Penang was reached in the early morning and the company with a German colonial man, who knew the Orient as he knew his own lands. I went ashore to a sampans and had a fine breakfast at the Eastern and Oriental hotel. It was a positive luxury to get some of the good fish of these waters served hot and to enjoy excellent tea. With a fellow American I visited in the cool of the morning the botanic gardens, which are 40 minutes from town by ricksha. Penang has very low, the only conspicuous landmark from the sea being the clock tower on the municipal building, but back of the town is a range of hills covered with tropical vegetation that is very refreshing to the eye.

FINE HOMES AT PENANG.
The road to the gardens is the prettiest that I have seen in the Orient. It is shaded with enormous virgin trees that resemble the avenue in their growth and on each side are the handsome bungalows of the residents of Penang. The miles in the hills back of Penang have made this city the center of wealth and the homes of Europeans here are as fine as those of Singapore. We went out the Kallang road and the Hurman road and the series of views on these roads, finely shaded avenues were most picturesque. All the houses were built with great roomy verandas, protected by Venetian blinds, the high French windows came down to the floor and the first floor was generally elevated from the ground so as to permit free circulation of air. All the houses were set in the midst of ample grounds planted to coconuts and other palms and a great variety of flowering trees and shrubs from the tropics. Especially effective were clumps of the Penang Bush palm, with its brilliant red trunk. In many gardens were large lawns of the stephanotis of Malacca, and the air was heavy with the sweet perfume of the wax-like white blossoms from which this well-known perfume is made. Near the gardens we passed a Chinese Shinto temple, with several acres of ground planted to the finest coconuts.

VISIT TO THE BOTANIC GARDENS.
The botanic gardens cannot be compared with those in Singapore, but here the land was laid out on the great advantage of a range of high wooded hills back of the gardens, with a fine waterfall which bridges down from the mountains water for the city's use. The gardens are full of rare trees and plants from all the tropical lands, of which the most impressive are the banyan, some of which cover a quarter of an acre; the rubber tree from Brazil and specimens are also well represented. Here, at Singapore, a number of shallow ponds were set, as at Singapore, of all colors. The return journey was made beautiful by lines of morning glories, but the shaded roads made the ride a delight. We passed many bullock carts and a number of native children going to school on bicycles. Penang gives the impression of wealth and comfort. The small European colony evidently believes in having all the conveniences which can be secured for residence in the tropics, but the result is that living is very costly. To maintain a very modest European establishment costs from $300 to $500 a month, as many servants are necessary and everything except food and fish must be imported. Most of the residents also keep a motor car and expensive entertainments are the rule. If one would keep in the social swim, hence married men, moderate salaries without children are forced to live at the hotels. Moderate rent and service would consume the greater part of their income. The life when one gets used to the climate, is said to be attractive, but for my part I would not live a year in Penang if the wealth of the tin mines were made over to me.

JESUS THE HEALER
Golden Text—Matthew viii. 17. Him self took our infirmities, and bare our diseases.
Mark i. 29-34; Matthew ix. 23-25.
(29) And straightway, when they were come out of the synagogue, they came into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. (30) Now Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and straightway they told him of her. (31) And he came and took her by the hand, and raised her up, and the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.
(32) And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were sick, and them that were possessed with devils. (33) And all the city was gathered together at the door. (34) And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils, and was not weary of doing them.
(35) And in the morning a great while before day, he rose up and went out, and departed into a desert place, and there prayed. (36) And Simon and they that were with him followed after him: (37) and they found him, and say unto him, All are seeking thee. (38) And he saith unto them, Let us go elsewhere into the next towns, that I may preach there also, for to this end came I forth. (39) And he went into their synagogue, and taught, and they were all amazed, saying, Whence hath this man all these things? and what wisdom is given unto him, that he doeth such mighty signs and powers? (40) And there cometh to him a leper, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. (41) And being moved with compassion, he stretched forth his hand, and touched him, and said unto him, I will; be thou made clean. (42) And straightway the leprosy departed from him, and he came and told them. (43) And he strictly charged him, and straightway sent him away, (44) and saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go, and shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, as the Lord hath commanded, for a testimony unto them. (45) But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to spread abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into a city, but was without in desert places: and they came to him from every quarter.
(46) And Jesus went about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of diseases, and all manner of sicknesses among the people. (47) And the report of him went forth into all Syria: and they brought unto him all that were sick, laden with divers diseases and torments, possessed with devils, and epileptic, and palsied; and he healed them. (48) And there followed him great multitudes from Galilee and Decapolis and Jerusalem and Judea and from beyond Jordan.
From the moment when our Lord descended upon the work of his public mission, his healing ministry was continuous. Every one of the evangelists has stories to tell of the exercise of his power in this direction; and they reveal his ability to deal with all kinds of material and mental diseases. The two photographs which accompany our lesson are suggestive of

There is a difference between "miraculous" and "supernatural." The first word, as we have said, implies malice, and we certainly wish the passage of its dearest value if we exclude spiritual malice. Now, leaving Isaiah, we turn to Matthew and following the same process of rendering in other words, we read first, instead of the took our infirmities, "the gold hold of our feebleness" or "our weakness" or perhaps even more bluntly, "our vulnerabilities," that is, those facts of our nature which lack strength. The second part of Matthew's quotation reads: "and bare our diseases." In which we have an exact counterpart to the first half of Isaiah's "he lifted our mal-ability, there lay his power to deal with spiritual malice, which resulted from the fact of atonement made possible by incarnation.

INSURES HIGHEST USE OF PUBLIC LANDS
From Report of Director, U. S. Geological Survey.
The chief advantage of land withdrawal and classification lies in its essential relation to the principle of proper disposition of the public domain, the real purpose of public-land administration being to insure such use of the land as will result in its highest use. The question of amendment of the present laws relating to the disposition of coal, oil, gas and phosphate deposits on the public domain is recognized as fairly before the public by the specific mention of these minerals in the withdrawal act.

The Magic Talking Box
It Was Only 34 Years Ago That Thomas A. Edison, Then Comparatively Unknown, Astonished the World With the Declaration That He Had Made a Machine That Could Talk.
From the Kansas City Star.
A little good sounds. Mrs. Meiba begins to sing. Knebel is playing his violin. London Ronald is playing his piano. They are in a little dining room in London, overlooking dripping telegraph wires and smoking chimneys, but the music they are making will be heard around the world. It is possible by means of the talking machine. It was just 34 years ago that Thomas A. Edison filed at Washington his patent for the phonograph. There have been many improvements since, but the instrument is fundamentally the same as it was when he conceived it. The invention of the phonograph was not by accident, as so many have attributed it, a needle prick on Edison's finger; but it was the result of careful hard study. It was made while Edison was seated near a ticking telegraph instrument. Here is where most of his inventions are conceived under the inspiration of the constant click, click or the mysterious keys. And it is fitting that this should be because the telegraph was Edison's first love. It was this instrument that led him into the strange land of invention and has since been responsible for his giving to the world more than a thousand inventions. But of the talking machine—
A Work Saver, His Idea.
Edison sought to make a device that would record the telegraph messages. It would lessen work. He went to work experimenting with a revolving platen over which he placed some tin-foil. One idea brought out another, and soon he was asking himself, Why not make a machine that will reproduce the human voice?
Edison didn't ask himself out loud. He was young then and someone might have heard the absurd statement and have had him tried for insanity. He kept his own counsel for a few days. He bought some raw material, routing his assistant, telling him how he wanted the things shaped. Knebel was ignorant concerning the ends toward which he was working. He was a telegraph work, because whenever Edison was successful in his inventions he shared his fortune with his workmen.
After the machine was completed, and incidentally after Edison had spent five days and as many sleepless nights working on it, he told Knebel what the machine was for.
"Make it talk to me!" exclaimed the German helper. He was dumfounded at the thought of such an idea.
"Impossible," he said, "a foolish waste of time and money."
Spoke to His Machine.
"We will see," said Edison, and at the same time he walked before the trumpet of the machine—
Mary had a little lamb
Its fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.
That was what he spoke into the trumpet. He moved a gear, turned a few screws, then said:
"Now listen, Knebel."
The result was astounding to the German. If he had not known Edison, he could not have believed his ears. The world was equally unprepared. A few days later when the announcement was given that Edison had invented a box that would talk, an invention which would save thousands of the human voice. Demonstrators soon carried phonographs to every city and exhibited them. Orders came fast and a factor was taken to its limit to supply the demand.
But it must not be supposed that Edison turned out a finished machine, the same phonograph we have today, at the very first. It took years to develop it. Nearly every year since there have been improvements added. But the marvelous invention stands, marvelous, scarcely characterizes it; for today we have this machine that not only reproduces our voice, but as well a dozen, or a whole band.
For instance, in that little room in London, where the three noted musicians gather, the machine reproduces movements of Meiba's lips, the court of Knebel's bow, and the surging of Ronald's fingers over the piano keys. All these things are recorded and reproduced by the fine point of one needle, not a needle for each sound or tone. Posterity, the millions of unborn in years to come, can listen to this beautiful music and enjoy it even as we do today.
Edison says the invention is simple. The principle on which the phonograph is built is the same as that of the gramophone in vibration. This produces a certain effect on the ear drum. When we say "mother" the printed word is not sent to our ear, but simply the vibration of air, the sound; and in our own minds we convert these vibrations into the word "mother."
So all the vibrations of sound made by a singer's voice, by a pianist's, and a violinist's, mingle in one continuous and varying undulation, enter the brass funnel or trumpet the same as our ear trumpet, and the stylus or needle running over a soap disk makes impressions according to the vibration.
After the impressions have been made another needle is inserted to trace in these impressions, the disk is made to revolve again and words come from the inanimate piece of machinery.
What makes words come from these little jerks of a needle is a question that even Edison cannot answer.
WATER POWER SITES WITHDRAWN
Water-power site reserves were created in Arizona, California, Idaho, Oregon and Utah during January by presidential proclamation to recommend the United States Geological Survey covering 1,811 acres. This action was taken in furtherance of the policy of withdrawing all public lands found on examination to possess value as power sites, pending legislation by Congress to allow the Government to lease or otherwise. The total area withdrawn outstanding on January 31, 1912, embraced 1,726,315 acres, including thousands of power sites.
During January 1,912, acres previously withdrawn were, on further examination, restored to entry as having no value for the development of power. The original withdrawals of power-sites lands, as recommended by the engineers, were, however, not made as much as possible, but where more detailed study was required, the public such areas were immediately restored to the public domain. Thus, of the nearly 2,000,000 acres which have been withdrawn during the last four years for power sites, 1,245,415 acres have been so restored.

Europe's Spy Army Daring Body of International Thieves

LL the larger nations of Europe have suddenly gone spy mad. Never before in the history of the world have there been so many spies and alleged spies arrested and brought to trial as in the past few months. England, France, Germany and Russia are constantly on the lookout for them. They think of nothing else. For a foreigner to have any unusual interest in the military or naval affairs of any of these nations is to make of himself a spy, and the most innocent inquiries are liable to result in serious results.

And there is good reason for this behavior. Many have recently attempted to decoy the spy scare saying that none of these nations have any unusual interest in the military or naval affairs of any of these nations is to make of himself a spy, and the most innocent inquiries are liable to result in serious results.

Interested in this. He decided to remain over night, and obtained at the military headquarters a card of admission to the range, though his requests for permission to view the siege gun trials was refused.

Sitting the same evening over his glass of beer at the inn, he got into conversation with two artillery non-commissioned officers, to whom he confessed his desire to obtain a few memorabilia of his visit in the shape of fragments of splintered shells. He was told that these were formerly to be purchased at the headquarters, but were now disposed of wholesale to a dealer in old iron.

At the same time it was hinted that for people in the position of his interlocutors there were other ways of getting hold of such things. With his senses sharpened by thirty years' service as a public official, Courtain sensed danger here, and hastily declined the suggestion.

He retired to rest suspecting nothing, but between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning he was awakened by a loud and peremptory knocking at the door. He opened and was rudely shaken into complete wakefulness by the sight of a couple of artillery officers and a body of soldiers. His clothes and luggage were seized and subjected to a thorough searching. Special and persistent inquiries were made after a camera which had been seen near him on the previous evening. This instrument ultimately turned out to be a pocket electric lantern belonging to the landlord of the inn. Courtain was able to establish his identity by means of a passport and a number of letters, and in due time was left to his own resources. At midday he returned to Vilsack.

On the following day, however, two gendarmes appeared in the house and rudely ransacked both his luggage and that of his family. A couple of days later the same thing was repeated at 5 o'clock in the morning. By this time Courtain had begun to find holiday making in that part of the country a little more than for his nerves and he fled hastily with his family to Nuremberg. But as they stepped out of the train they were confronted by a party of detectives, who insisted on escorting them to the Rathaus. Here they were again thoroughly searched and, though his wife and child were allowed to go, Courtain himself was detained. Next morning he was conveyed to a prison van, with a cartload of criminals, to the examining jail, where he spent five days in a filthy cell and as many nights in a dirty bed, where he contracted a skin disease.

At the end of this period he was at last informed that one of the officers with whom he had spoken had informed against him, stating that he had asked the soldiers to procure him an unneeded gun of shrapnel C, and that he had also said that he kept up correspondence with friends in France and was in pecuniary difficulties.

HERE facts serve to show what a dangerous and difficult business it is to spy on Germany. Not what a careful watch Germany places on her military secrets and how easy it is for a spy to excite suspicion. They also indicate that Germany has military secrets which it would be to the interest of other countries to know.

don solicitor, at Bremen and promptly secured him of being a spy.

MR STEWART had been spending some time about Bremerhaven and other North Sea ports. He was supposed to be a more tourist visiting that part of Germany, but some of the questions which he asked of different seafaring people with whom he came in contact aroused the suspicions of the authorities and brought about his arrest. Some photographs showing some fortification works along the coast and river banks were found in his possession and these were the basis of the charges which were made against him.

When Stewart was brought to trial the only witness against him was a Belgian, who was reputed to be an international spy and was known to have served several terms in prison. British feeling was much inflamed about the affair, and it was said that a Belgian entrapment of Stewart for the purpose of getting paid for turning informer. He was sentenced to three and a half years' confinement in a fortress. As a sequel to this incident, Heinrich Grose was sentenced three days later to three years' penal servitude in England.

In the meantime while England and Germany were trying to get even with each other, Austria had caught a most interesting international spy, who was a German by birth, but had been in the employ of several different governments for the purpose of discovering military secrets in other countries. His career was most amazing and was full of the most thrilling escapades.

His name was Hermann Cords. The son of a Prussian singer at the Berlin Opera House, he deserted from the German navy seven years ago to embark upon the adventurous career which finally brought him before his judges. Starting off in a Paris private inquiry office, where his business was to obtain plans and documents relating to the governments of various countries, he was sent to Stockholm in 1905 with details of Austrian military preparations for Russia.

From Sweden he went "on business" to England and falling short of ready money forged a check and was sent to prison at Exeter. Next, at Monte Carlo, he was engaged at a fine salary on behalf of Spain, but proceeded to inform the country he was to have spied upon, receiving a higher fee for doing this. Love then entered into Herr Cords' affairs. At Metz, posing as Harry Fraser—other aliases were Count Bleucher and Shee and Edward Lester—he made the acquaintance of an actress named Oneschewski, who at the trial later, said that Cords posed as an American impresario, took her as far as Antwerp en route for his home in New York and left her at the quayside.

AT Lyons he obtained a post as maitre d'hotel to the German consul, stole 5,000 francs and had to leave the town hastily, because "another man's wife persisted in chasing me," as he expressed himself in court. In Austria, Cords' next place of call, the prisoner proceeded on an attempt to corrupt military officers, receiving a fee of 6,000 francs for each discovery. In this way he succeeded in getting valuable photographs of Trieste and Pola, and later left for Malta. Here he was shot in the leg by a sentry, lost his job in the international spy firm which employed him, and went into Italy's service. He was sent to England on a difficult errand and later to Austria.

It was further shown at the trial that this extraordinary man on one occasion actually displayed the portrait of his own father—the nearest photograph to hand—as that of a treacherous spy. The prisoner had several pretty girls in his employ with whom he tried to get around officers, and these apparently proved a most valuable asset. Herr Cords' most unfortunate act was to charge certain Austrian officers with treason at the trial. These all succeeded in clearing themselves, but one was actually on the point of blowing his brains out. The court sentenced Cords to two and half years' hard labor.

Cords' case illustrates the career of the typical spy. Such are employed by almost all the European governments and those governments undertake no responsibility for them beyond that of seeing that they get their pay. If they get caught they must get out of the difficulty the best way they can. The life of a spy at the present day is not a bed of roses. Even if he be an army officer, getting caught means that he will not only be sent to hard labor by the country that he is spying upon, but will also be deprived of his commission by the country for which he is spying.

know. This incident brought to light the fact that Germany's shrapnel C was a sort of shell different from those in use in England or France and that this shrapnel would get great advantage from knowing the method of its manufacture. Probably it was this bit of information which brought on the terrible invasion of Germany by the spies of England, France and Russia, while Germany, as a sort of exchange of courtesies, flooded these three nations with her own spies.

A few weeks later came Germany's retaliation. Five English spies were arrested at Hamburg. The most curious part of this affair is that the leader of this band of spies was not only named Schultz, but Max Schultz. He was of German parentage, but a British subject. He and his four associates had been engaged as ship brokers in Hamburg for years. The German authorities accused them of having used their profession as a cover for corrupting shipyard workmen to betray naval secrets. The evidence against them was flimsy, but they were nevertheless sentenced to twenty months' imprisonment. The injustice of the trial raised quite a furore in England, but it was nothing compared with the outcry raised later by the trial of Bertrand Stewart.

This was another case of retaliation. Some time ago Heinrich Grose, a German merchant seaman—captain, was arrested at Portsmouth on the charge of espionage. He was immediately arraigned and held without bail for examination later. Before he came to trial the Germans got busy and hunted about for an English spy whom they could arrest to add to their list. They found Mr. Bertrand Stewart, a well-known London

LILIPUTIAN RAILROADS THAT PAY A PROFIT

HERE was a little story in the papers the other day that a little town in the state of Kansas, called Garden City, was the site of a new railroad. The story was that a man named Myers had been successful in securing the right to build a railroad from Garden City to the town of Hays, a distance of about 100 miles. The story was that Myers had been successful in securing the right to build a railroad from Garden City to the town of Hays, a distance of about 100 miles.

The Myers plant when completed will add another 100 miles to the "short" line of the United States, of which there are now 1,100 miles. The new line will be 100 miles long and will have 100 miles of track. The new line will be 100 miles long and will have 100 miles of track.

sion of new political ideas the legal forms of society are gradually changing and fresh civic institutions are constantly developed to meet these new wants, and thus a government controlled and administered almost exclusively by men in dealing with these new and peculiar problems which affect all aspects of life, must of necessity fail to deal with them adequately, that all the remedial powers, all the understanding and training which society possesses must be brought to bear upon them if our nation would build its own in this complex modern world in which we live.

FIVE DAYS COMMENCING MONDAY—
MLLE. ATHMORE GREY
SATURDAY—TOP O' TH' WORLD

VERY night this week the Opera house will be open to the theater-going public. Tomorrow matinee and running five days, Mlle. Athmore Grey the classic English dancer, will be seen in a series of dances. Three performances will be presented daily—matinee each day. A higher class of attraction has not been offered this season at popular prices.

Saturday returns the popular musical extravaganza "Top O' Th' World" with Bailey and Austin.

Classic Dances
of the Opera House

Opening tomorrow's matinee and running five days only, with a special matinee each day, Mlle. Athmore Grey will be seen in a series of classic dances never before offered at popular prices in this city. This being the new idea of popular amusement now ruling so successfully in Europe.

Lovers of the beauty and grace of the classical dances will be highly delighted with the performances which Mlle. Grey will be seen in at the Opera house this week. Her program is the following:

Rubinstein's Caprice
Mendelssohn's Spring Song
The Peer Gynt Suite of Dances (a) Morning; (b) Asa's Death; (c) Anitra's Dance; (d) Dance of the Gnomes, Grief.
The great Parisian presentation of the classic "Salome."
Mlle. Grey is interesting these dances in a manner that is above all criticism. She will also be heard in songs written for her which she created. This is a little swaying, capricious creature of moods and motion, with dark eyes. On the street she is something of a contrast to her stage self, the passionate woman of the dances, with a pale and quiet face that is serious and wistful.

Mlle. Grey will open her program in her late French-American songs which she has created, "Society," "French Maid" and "Leading the Regiment." She will be accompanied by a special orchestra of five pieces.

Three performances will be presented daily: Matinee, 3 p. m., evenings, 7:45 and 9. Seats will be reserved for the first evening performance. Prices, 10c, 20c, 30c, 40c, 50c, 60c, 70c, 80c, 90c, 1.00. Seats on selling at the box office.

Helen Ware Says Singing Helps to Heal the Sick

From The Baltimore Sun, Feb. 4, 1912.
Helen Ware, who is starting in George Broadhurst's play, "The Price," at the Grand Opera House, has been the head of a medical mission to inaugurate in hospitals a new science for the treatment of the sick. It is the science of healing by music and song.
Miss Ware is scarcely known as a singer, yet she possesses a particularly sweet soprano voice. In "The Price," this hitherto unsuspected gift of the young actress is displayed to advantage. She sings with deep feeling and rare charm, a song entitled "Rose in the Bud." Miss Ware, in speaking of her voice, tells of her experience in singing for the sick.
"Phonotherapy, the medical world is calling it," explained Miss Ware, "I cannot claim that it originated with me, for it was purely an accidental discovery on my part. I happened to be present at a private sanatorium when a well-known doctor visited it, and at the request of the head physician, sang for the patients. The doctor remarked to me afterward that he had noticed that several of the patients who were racked with pain, had lain unusually quiet while the hymn 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth' was being sung. As if it had a soothing effect upon them. My companion told the doctor that I could sing a little, and as I had become interested in the novel statement of the doctor, I sang, 'What We Gather at the River.' The doctor de-

"Top O' Th' World" Saturday Next

"Top O' Th' World," the beautiful fantasia of music and comedy of the greatest north pole region will be seen at the Opera house Saturday evening next, March 9.

This engagement marks the third appearance of the unusually successful comedy in this city and the reports from these cities where it has appeared this season say that the company is stronger than ever and the scenery and costumes are new and pretty.

"The Top O' Th' World" is an attraction which appeals to everyone. Children delight in the fantastic story of the girl who wanted to grow up in a single night and who visited the "Top O' Th' World" in her effort to find Santa Claus, and persuade him to let her become a real grown-up immediately. Groups on the other hand, take a special delight in the catch music, spectacular scene effects, new and novel chorus numbers.

Seats will be placed on sale at the box office Thursday.

"The Pink Lady" March 11 and 12

An early offering for the Opera house is a particularly happy one, as it brings to Colorado Springs at this time that wonderfully successful piece, "The Pink Lady." Klaw & Erlanger's musical comedy triumph, which has just closed its run of a year at the home theater in New York, where it has earned for a few less than 400 performances and was seen by 357,921 people.

It seems a tardy time to introduce

"The Pink Lady" to the city of Paris to excitement. From the first everybody is familiar with it, and it is the most delightful of all. We are therefore, in the city of Paris, able to see it in its original form, established later and in a more established form, but in its original form, it is a happy combination of book, lyrics and melody, score was written by C. M. S. M. Lillian and Ivan Carlisle. The former adapted the story after the French farce, "Le Surcouf," which ran for a year at the Parisian Theatre des Varieties. The latter composed the music. Georges Berr and Marcel Landrieu are its authors. It has been equally successful in London, New York and elsewhere.

Mr. Carlisle, as a member of the Grand Theatre hits to a score, but in more has he given us a work to equal the delights of "The Pink Lady." However, it is in the combination of book and score that it really shines for they are interdependent and one cannot be the effect of the other.

As for its story, "The Pink Lady" is a well-worked-out plot that depends for its humor upon its situation and its cleverly contrived incidents. Its central figure is a double dealer in antiquities in Paris, who allows himself to be dragged into a series of adventures to help a young fellow out of a predicament. Having once agreed to assume a part not suited to him, the further complication develops of the innocent dealer being mistaken for a satyr whose escapades have stirred even the gods. The story is a happy one, and the plot is a masterpiece of comedy. The company is a first-class one, and the scenery and costumes are new and pretty.

Magdalena, George Reed, Jack Flynn, Fred Fisher, John L. S. and the Pink Lady, will be seen here two days, March 11 and 12.

Aborn Opera Co. Will Be Heard Here

March 17 is the date set for the Aborn Opera company's Colorado Springs engagement, when they will present a gorgeous and massive production of "The Bohemian Girl."

Containing exquisite lyric gems, including the fine old aria "Then You'll Remember Me," "I Dreamt I Dwell in Marble Halls," and "The Heart Bowed Down," combined with a full grand opera performance and a stage spectacle of great magnitude and novel up-to-date features, figure in an elaborate revival of the Paris version of Balfe's greatest lyric drama.

The big production is said to employ an ensemble of 100 artists with vocal, choral, corps de ballet and orchestra of grand opera strength, and introduced in the highly spectacular features of the work are a troupe of real Tzigan or Gypsy acrobats, trapeze artists, dancing girls, fortune tellers, a cavalcade of horses and seven 50-foot carloads of gorgeous and massive scenery.

News and Gossip

The Pink Lady company which will make its first appearance in London at the Globe theater on Easter Monday night, will be seen from New York on March 21. The company has been playing in Boston. Among its principals who will go abroad are Frank Labor, Hazel Dawn, Alice Dwyer, Alice Hegeman, Jack Henderson, Crawford Kent, Louise Kelley and Scott Welch.

Robby Fountain, well-known showman who has many friends in this city, has been engaged by Sun Brothers as manager. Mr. Fountain is engaging many new features and promises a number of surprises in the odd entertainment line.

Ben-Hur, the wonder of all theatrical wonders which has every box of floor record worth while to its credit, is up to its old tricks again. In Baltimore its eighth engagement in that city—the play attracted the biggest receipts it ever rolled up there. Another high water mark was established in Philadelphia where the advance sale opened at the Forrest theater.

In the burning of the Grand Opera house, St. Paul, A. W. Dingwall lost a theater and Gus Hill lost a "Mutt and Jeff" production. Mr. Dingwall intends to rebuild the theater which was one of the Little & Dingwall holdings, and Mr. Hill already is busy in replacing the "Mutt and Jeff" outfit. Mr. Hill is exceedingly annoyed over the disaster because the advance sale in St. Paul promised well, and he had estimated his week's profits at $20,000. The company, appearing in St. Paul, was the one organized for the Chicago run of "Mutt and Jeff." Always reckless with his figures, Hill estimates his loss at $12,000. On Sunday next, however, Hill says that a new production will have been completed and installed in a Minneapolis theater.

Broadway heard the particulars this afternoon of the illustrated elopement of Harry Cort, son of John Cort, the western theatrical manager, and Miss Mabel Towers, daughter of a millionaire Montana land owner. Miss Towers met young Cort in Los Angeles and Seattle. They were close friends until the older Cort sent his son east. Last week Miss Towers and her father arrived here en route to Germany. Last Tuesday when the Towers were aboard the Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, John Cort arrived in a high powered automobile held the boat, hunted up his son who was hidden on board, and fairly dragged him off. "They'll wait a few years before they will get married," shouted Cort to Daddy Towers as the steamer sailed.

Georgia Drew Mendum will have the title role in Mori Singer's new production, "A Modern Eve," which will be produced soon. This is one of the European comic operas which Mr. Singer secured for American production while abroad recently. Charles

In "The Real Thing" there are two children in the cast and they are treated like royal personages. In their trip through the south and west this season, Miss Croghan will carry five children with her, for the two parts that are in the play and they will alternate in playing. In order to carry these children comfortably three adults are with the company to take care of them and two of the adults are parents of the children. Miss Croghan sees to it herself that the children are well taken care of and she is as particular about them as if they were her own. That Miss Croghan does take care of them is evident from the fact that, in order that the two parts in the play may be well taken, eight persons are with the company and not one of these has anything to do except play one of the child's parts or take care of the children who do appear on the stage.

Henry Miller has in preparation, in association with Klaw & Erlanger, a new comedy by A. E. Thomas, entitled, "The Rainbow." After a brief tour on the road Mr. Miller will come to New York for his spring season. Associated with him in the cast are Robert St. John, Malcolm Dunn, Charles Raymond, George Pierce, Daniel Perini, Effingham Pinto, Fanta Marneff, Laura Hope Crews, Hope Lathrop, Ruth Chatterton, Ethel Martin and Ruth Holt Boucicault.

Detective William J. Burns is hard at work on a new detective play for Klaw & Erlanger. The play will be based on his personal experiences in his pursuit of criminals and his methods of detection. Harriet Ford and Harvey J. Offenberg will assist him in the work. The hero will be a detective of the Burns type.

When Great Actors Played in Burlesque

The palm days of burlesque were before the period of opera-bouffe, and the coming of the "English blondes." In those days when stock companies were the rule and Mitchell and Burton controlled the "circuit," singing and dancing were as much a part of a star's education as elocution and elocution and it was not considered beneath the dignity of the Van Winkle of the Hamlet. One night in traveling parts again, serious the next.

Edwin Booth early in his career appeared in a few entertainments as "Blue Beard" and Mr. Jefferson was enormously popular as Beppo, Haxabab, Panzer, Medea, the Pharaoh, and Mazarin. It was his recording his performance as Granby that to the young land of Mrs. John Wood, with his original grape-vine twist and burlesque break-down. His performance of Mazarin at the Winter Garden in 1841, is still a pleasant memory in many minds. In it he sang a celebrated aria, "The Victim of Despair," and his daring act upon the bare back of the wild rocking-horse of the town-scape was, perhaps, the most remarkable performance of its kind ever witnessed by a danger-loving public.

During his several engagements at the Winter Garden, Mr. Jefferson was supported by Mrs. John Wood, particularly as Isabella to his Sir Balthazar. One of the best burlesque actresses of the time was known as Mrs. Balthazar. She played at St. Nibbles to the catalog of Mark Twain, in March 1852, and almost immediately after her appearance in the New York stage was made at the grand opera house, in November of the same year in John Brougham's burlesque "King Lear." When that humorist was marked, although not of Mrs. Wood, that he was supported by vegetable soup.

Other famous actors who appeared in burlesque at that time were Charles Purke, half brother to Joseph Jefferson, and Daniel Setchell.

One of the funniest burlesques ever seen on the New York stage was when De Wolf Hopper played Julius in Marshall P. Wilder's "Romeo." Not goodwin was also a famous burlesque actor, as was Henry E. Dixey. From Hutton's "Curiosities of the American Stage."

MAKE "NOTE" OF THESE INTERPRETATIONS

NOT infrequently terms are encountered in descriptions of fancy work and decoration that prove puzzling, and it is decidedly inconvenient to look up their definition or interpretation. It will be wise to make a note of various explanations gleaned from different sources and have them convenient for ready reference. Here are a few "samples" for the amateur decorator's notebook.

The "frieze" of a room is that ornamented portion of the wall immediately under the edge of the ceiling, the frieze of a curtain of portieres is the band of embroidery or other decoration at the top. The meaning of the word frieze, from which it is derived, is "enriched" or "embroidered."

"Dado" is applied to the ornamentation or ornamental fabric placed on a wall directly above the base-board or skirting. The dado may be of paper, wood, lacustria-Walton, stamped leather or fine matting, or other material. In fact, whatever is applied to the wall in that situation.

"Lintel" is the portion of the door frame at the top, the ends of which rest on the jambs or side-posts of the door. When a portiere is hung inside of the door frame it is said to be suspended under the lintel. Frequently the brackets are attached on the outside of the lintel, and so over the door instead of within the doorway.

"Diaper" is a method of decorating a wall, panel, curtain or any plain surface by covering it with a continuous design of flowers, rosettes, or other figures either in squares or circles, or some geometrical form resembling the pat-

Rambler rose embroidery is very popular, as the rose seems never to lose its attractiveness to the needle woman.

Although many shades of rose color may be used in the construction of this little flower, it is built upon entirely different lines from any of the embroidered roses.

The foundation is padded with a strand of the silk, and the center is composed of one or more French knots, the number depending upon the height you wish the rose to be. One large French knot for the center is usually sufficient, and over and around this center the rows are worked in overlapping outline stitch.

The quaternaries are adorning orange, red, and brown, in deeper tone, than a purple, brown and green, and a lot of various shades of red, blue and white.

The interstices of silks and stitches expanded for the benefit of amateur embroiderers, will also prove convenient "tools" when kept for handy reference. Nine times out of ten the favorite lot of embroiderers will be some form of white linen, striped to be embroidered, and a few hints in regard to such work may prove useful.

First, use only the best silk, that is warranted to wash, poor silk will run and fade.

Fine floss is the kind most used for

The first two rows are embroidered with the needle inserted well under the preceding rows, and this raises the center of the rose as the overlapping stitches are brought nearer the edge, they are gradually flattened.

This little rose really helps to pad itself if correctly worked, and the work is not complicated, but it does require practice to fashion these compact little flowers.

The leaves are carried out in bird's-eye stitch, the briars and stems in single stitch and outlining. Forget-me-nots and daisies are often combined with the roses in this embroidery, each petal being formed by a single stitch, taken with a double strand of the floss. Silk is best to use for this work, and should be of a coarse quality.

hand indicated, is used for outlining very solid work.

As to the number of shades used for each flower or leaf, of course the larger they are the greater the number required to be most effective, six and seven are used sometimes, while again only three are needed.

The beauty of this form of embroidery depends largely upon the evenness and exactness of the shading, and particular attention must be given to this part of the work. When once thoroughly familiar with the different varieties and qualities of the embroidery silks and their possibilities in harmonious blending, the entire work on embroidery will be delightfully simplified.

MISS NORRIS' ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

W A N—The needle used for punch work is the kind of needle that sailmakers use, number 18. If you cannot obtain this three-sided needle, a large ordinary needle may be used.

It must be large enough to comfortably separate the strands of thread in the fabric, or in other words, to punch holes in the material.

Rather open mesh linen or round thread must be used as the work can not be done on any closely woven material.

For dresses and blouses, matelassette and voile are well adapted to this work and all kinds of a loose weave.

Am glad you care for the blouses, sign and hope you will have no difficulty in executing the work.

many ways, for you can use the same pattern may be applied to different articles, with equal good effect.

Am delighted that the needle craft page has been so successful in its first issue, and hope you will continue to send in which, so that it will not be broken.

Transfer Patterns Not Sold.

Mrs. W.—Transfer patterns are not sold. The designs are drawn to a size so that our readers can copy them, without any expense, as the work is easily transferred by means of the press.

The material is of a fine, even texture, and is of a color that is well adapted to the work. It is of a fine, even texture, and is of a color that is well adapted to the work.

Alphabet.

Mrs. C.—The first portion of the initial letters was published in No. 26, 1911, and the second portion was given in No. 27, 1912.

An early issue of the paper was published in No. 26, 1911, and the second portion was given in No. 27, 1912.

Morning Glory Center.

Mrs. L.—A morning glory center may be embroidered in either white or colors. All white pieces are always in good taste, and have the advantage of being easily laundered.

A morning glory design may be embroidered in such a wealth of colors that it will appeal very strongly to one who loves needle painting.

If done in colors, a study of the natural blossom is best, or if this is impossible, a colored plate of these gorgeous flowers will answer the purpose, which is to study the wonderful coloring. Blue, pink, red, white are a useful nature in harmonious blending.

The work should be done in white thread, with the color of the flowers padded.

The funnel of the flower is embroidered in a light shade if the blossom is dark, or in a dark shade if the blossom is light, thus attaining the desired effect.

An easier white or gray thread may be used for colored work, as it is a neutral ground and serves to harmonize the colors.

No Directions.

Mrs. C.—The illustration for the lace and insertion was made especially large and plain, so that the pattern could be copied from the illustration.

Would advise that you have some crocheter worker help you, as the construction is not hard.

Am exceedingly sorry to disappoint you, but the illustration was deemed sufficient, without any directions.

Date of Issue.

A. M. P.—All issues of the paper have been secured for the library of the department.

The issue you wish to see is the one that half of the alphabet was published in No. 26, 1911. As you wish to see the issue that half of the alphabet was published in No. 26, 1911, you will find it in the issue that half of the alphabet was published in No. 26, 1911.

Pine Cone Design.

Mrs. C.—The pine cone design is a very simple one, and is well adapted to the work. It is of a fine, even texture, and is of a color that is well adapted to the work.

Coach Strap.

V. A.—A coach strap makes an exceedingly dainty gift for the baby, strong, elastic, and with a sturdy ribbon, which should be either pink or blue, with a small bow at each end, and which the strap is fastened to the coach, is used for this attractive strap.

If you wish it to be more elaborate, an embroidered band may form the center, with the colored elastic at each end. A ribbon may also be used at the end of the strap, for the forming of the band at the end.

The fasteners may be large hooks sewed to each end of the strap.

New Designs in Cross Stitch

The popularity of the cross stitch embroidery for various purposes instead of waning, increases as the durability of this sort of ornamentation is demonstrated, and requests for designs which may be easily executed are numerous. Pictured here are three patterns which will be found useful for towel ends, cushions, table runners, and other articles. Colors may be selected to suit the purpose for which the designs are to be used.

Scrim Curtain.

Mrs. F.—The scrim curtain is a very simple one, and is well adapted to the work. It is of a fine, even texture, and is of a color that is well adapted to the work.
